'Cracker-Barrel Talks'

By Mary Spargo
Post Reporter

The "two Frankensteins" of "higher taxes" and "inflation" must be shackled by a nonpartisan crusade for better government, Herbert Hoover warned last night.

The former President spoke before the Washington Conference of the Citizens Committee on the Hoover Reports for the reorganization of the Federal Government.

Meanwhile, in a message from his Key West, Fla., vacation retreat, President Truman promised a two-pronged campaign next year to put over the Hoover reorganization commission's proposals for better government at less cost.

"Not only legislative changes and reorganization plans are required but also improved operating practices within the agencies of Government," Mr. Truman wrote.

"I have already called on department heads to make every effort to that end. Their response has been most gratifying.

"Recently I appointed a committee of experts to assist in this effort, and I shall continue to give the matter my close, personal attention."

The message, addressed to Dr. Robert L. Johnson, president of Temple University, and chairman of the Citizens Committee for the Hoover Report, said that support from outside the Government as well as from within is essential.

Former President Hoover received the first good government award plaque given by the United States Junior Chamber of Commerce. Ralph A. Rohweder, who made the presentation, said the first project of the Junior Chamber of Commerce this coming year

Western Union Cuts Off Service To Florida Bookies

Tallahassee, Fla., Dec. 12 (U.P.).—Western Union Telegraph today cut the main communication line allegedly serving Florida bookies at 1:30 p. m.

Had the company failed to observe an order from the Railroad and Public Utilities Commission to cease providing facilities for the Intrastate News Service Company, it would have faced a contempt citation which could carry a fine up to $5000.

The commission announced it also had notified Western Union to cancel wire facilities for Hollywood News Service, which Attorney General Richard Ervin said operated from the same Jacksonville office as Intrastate News.

The commission had set a 2 p. m. deadline today for Western Union to cut its facilities to Intrastate.

Acalotti Case

Police Deny Acceptance Of Bribes

By Benjamin Bradlee
Post Reporter

A District Court jury of six men and six women will get the threat case against news dealer Attilio Acalotti, alias Till Alcott, "mayor of Thomac Circle," today.

The defense rested its case yesterday after three policemen denied from the stand charges brought by the Government's key witness, Bernice Franklin, that Acalotti "paid them off once a month."

Acaltti is being tried in District Court for obstructing justice by threatening Miss Franklin on two occasions while she was a Government witness. As a result of her testimony, the special District gambling grand jury named Acalotti in three gambling indictments in April.

In summing up the case, Acalotti's lawyer, Charles E. Ford, urged the jurors not to convict his client on the testimony of "this unholy trinity, these characters—I can't in good faith call them women, much less ladies, because my mother taught me to respect women."

Ford referred to Miss Franklin,

Land Agency Head Sees Marshal Heights Plan As Still Having Chance

By Edward F. Ryan

Senator John J. Sparkman (D., Ala.) gathered Washington officials and citizens around a big Capitol conference table last night to look for a place to start the District's long-delayed slum-clearance program.

"My hope," said Sparkman at the end of a two-hour discussion, "is that we can work out something—I don't know what it may be."

His reaction reflected the evening's testimony by officials of four Washington agencies concerned with the still-to-be-started postwar redevelopment program.

The conference will be resumed tonight, when representatives of

Grocer's Appeal Against School Tuition Is Denied

A nonresident cannot get free tuition in District schools even though her father pays taxes on a local business, the United States Court of Appeals ruled yesterday.

The decision upheld the District Court refusal in 1948 to enjoin the Superintendent of Schools from expelling Sarah D. Eisenberg, then a student at Eliot Junior High School. She resides with her father, Isaac Eisenberg, at 1701 Kenilworth ave., Prince Georges County. The father operates a grocery in the District and pays business taxes.

When Sarah enrolled as a pupil at Eliot for the first semester of the 1948-1949 school year she was advised by authorities that the sum of $80.16 must be paid for that semester. Her father submitted the payment of his local taxes as a credit against the tutelage charge, but this was not allowed.

The statute in question was the District Appropriation Act for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1949. It states, "No part of the appropriations herein made for the public schools of the District of Columbia shall be used for the free instruction of pupils who dwell outside the District of Columbia."

Air Force Orders 1070 New Planes

By John G. Norris
Post Reporter

The Air Force has issued orders for the procurement of 1070 aircraft costing approximately $1,200,000,000 — including 34 more giant Convair B-36s and 82 Boeing jet bombers.

This huge batch of orders—to be bought with fiscal 1950 appropriations—represents a cutback of 265 planes and 200 million dollars from original procurement plans. The economies are in addition to the 500 million dollars impounded by President Truman which would have bought another 474 planes.

No announcement of the program has been made, but The Washington Post learned that directions to place the orders have been issued.

Included in the revised 1950 procurement program are 568 fighters, 103 transports, 272 trainers and 11 rescue craft.

Congress voted $1,900,000,000 for Air Force plane procurement—a program which would have bought some 1809 aircraft and which was 500 million dollars more than asked by the President. Mr. Truman announced he would not spend the additional half billion dollars.

Officials said the additional 200-million-dollar cut was ordered by Defense Secretary Louis Johnson after long consideration. They pointed out that additional orders could be placed later.

The revised 1950 program provides for 120 Republic F-84E fighters.

The B-36 order represents a sharp cut from original plans. Under the first allotment, 51 rather than 34 of the six-engine Convair bombers would have been ordered.

Only two types of bombers are included in the 1950 program—B-36 and the fast Boeing B-47s.

Bulk of the fighter orders went to North American for 333 F-86s. Lockheed received a contract for 188 twin-seater F-94 night fighters, a modification of the F-80 Shooting Star. Northrop also got an order for 27 F-89 night fighters.

Officials said part of the F-86 order probably will be switched to North American F-93s. This is a radical modification of the F-86, with a pointed nose, flush air inlets

U. S. Warns Bulgaria on False Charges

Restrictions Imposed On Minister in Sofia Cited in New Protest

By the United Press

The United States last night warned Bulgaria that it "cannot ignore" her restrictions on American diplomats and her "false" conspiracy charges against United States Minister Donald R. Heath.

Undersecretary of State James E. Webb delivered the warning orally to Bulgarian Charge d'Affair Peter Voutov and hinted the United States and Bulgaria may be headed for a diplomatic break.

In announcing the warning, the State Department recalled that this Government previously had protested Bulgaria's charges that Heath conspired with former Bulgarian Vice Premier Traicho Kostov against the Bulgarian government.

The United States asked for a retraction, but Bulgaria, the department said, replied with scurrilous newspaper articles indicating to the Bulgarian public the State Department had deliberated lied.

"This deliberate attempt to involve the United States Minister has compelled the United States Government to question the Bulgarian government's intentions with respect to the maintenance of normal relations between the two countries," the department said.

It said that Webb, in his conversation with Voutov, "referred to the unprecedented restrictions imposed upon the legation and its personnel, making it virtually impossble for the legation to perform its normal diplomatic and consular functions."

"Dr. Voutov," the department said, "was informed that the United States Government cannot ignore, and takes a most serious view of, such deliberate actions which must inevitably affect re-

Census Data On Incomes May Be Mailed

Persons not wishing to give detailed data on their incomes to census takers can send the information by mail to the Census Bureau, Dr. Philip M. Hauser, acting director, said yesterday.

The announcement came in reply to Congressmen and others who have sent up a howl over the income questions to be asked as a part of the forthcoming 1950 census.

It was not certain last night, however, whether even this announcement would end the clamor—much of it coming from Republicans—that has followed the disclosure in The Washington Post a week ago that questions would be asked concerning private incomes.

The proposal is the same as the one used to quiet similar objections in 1940. At that time, al-

Sailor Tells Of Rescuing Survivors

Robert Hensley, 26, a sailor from Abilene, Kans., survived the DC-3 crash.

With a buddy, Chief Petty Officer Jeff Buchanan, Hensley hauled many of the passengers out of the ship.

This is Hensley's story:

"We got on today at Norfolk, Va., for a few days' leave in Washington. Then I was going on to Philadelphia.

"I was sitting in the very last seat. He"—motioning to Buchanan—"was sitting next to me.

"We knew we were coming in for a landing. They had us fasten our safety belts. The 'No Smoking' lights went on.

We came in for a landing and sort of made a couple of jumps and hit. There was a small swerve just before we hit.

"I got up and went out a hole in the side. The left side was split wide open. I didn't black out. I saw the hole and I went on out of it, onto the wing.

"That was the first time I knew w were in the water.

"It was 20 minutes or more before they came after us. It was very shallow water. The crash boats came alongside the plane.

"We started pulling the survivors out."

Burke, Head of Navy's 'Op.-23,' Is Taken Off Promotion List

By Bert Andrews
NYHT News Service

A Navy selection board's recommendations for promotions from captain to rear admiral have been held up for a month by the White House under circumstances which may lead to investigations by the Senate and House Armed Services Committees.

Members of the two committees have heard that the list has been revised to eliminate the name of Capt. Arleigh A. Burke, an outstanding figure in the war in the Pacific, who came into disfavor with some in the Truman Administration by his more recent direction of "Operation 23."

"Operation 23" was the group set up in the Navy to furnish the Navy's views to high uniformed and civilian men in the Navy Department in the unification controversy.

The selection board, consisting of nine men ranging from rear admiral up, met on November 12 to study records of roughly 200 captains from whom 18 or so could be picked for covetcd vacancies of rear admiral.

The list went over to the White House about Thanksgiving time.

It was sent back to the selection board a few days later, with instructions to knock Captain Burke's name off.

Under the law, the President can remove a name. He cannot order a specific name put on in place of the knocked off man, and the board must select another name from the eligible list.

The selection board reconvened.

Meanwhile, President Truman had gone to Key West for a vacation.

On December 5 the revised list was flown to Key West.

It is still there.

It is the first time since 1916 that such a list has not been approved by the President and an-

1949 Rent Control Law Upheld By Supreme Court's 8-0 Vote

By Chalmers M. Roberts
Post Reporter

By an 8-to-0 vote, the Supreme Court yesterday upheld the 1949 rent control law.

It did so with nothing more than this unusual four-word reference to a lower court decision: "The judgment is reversed."

The act, which covers all of the United States except the District of Columbia, was held unconstitutional by a District Court judge in Chicago last August 8 on the grounds the "local option" provision for decontrol was too large a delegation of congressional power. Six other District Court judges subsequently held the law constitutional so the Chicago decision has never had any practical effect.

In announcing its decision yesterday, the high court cited its own desision in 1948 on the 1947 rent law. In that case the Supreme Court approved a delegation of decontrol powers to the Housing Expediter.

Tighe Woods, the current Housing Expediter, last night said he was "pleased that the Supreme

U. N. Group Offers 5 Projects To Aid Arab Economic Revival

Cairo, Dec. 12 (AP). — The foundation for an Arab "TVA" was laid today in recommendations by the United Nations Economic Mission to the Middle East.

The plan would help put 652,000 unemployed Arab refugees to work on five "pilot" public works projects to pioneer a long-range Arab economic revival.

Gordon Clapp, head of the U. N. mission and chairman of the Tennessee Valley Authority, said the projects recommended to the U. N. Palestine Conciliation Commission were:

1. Reclamation of the great Ghab swamp area on the Orontes River in western Syria for agricultural use. This would provide permanent livelihood for a number of refugees and include the establishment of new villages.

2. Technical investigation preparatory to the ultimate creation of a large-scale TVA development on the Litani River of Lebanon. This would include full engineering, geological and economic studies. Clapp described the river as "one of the most magnificent for hydroelectric devel-

7 of 19 Injured Are Reported To Be in Critical Condition at Bolling Air Base Hospital

Four persons died and 19 were injured, some critically, last night when a Capital Airlines DC-3 airliner slipped out of radar control and crashed into mud and water a short distance south of National Airport.

Pinned in the plane in the Potomac River bed and believed dead are William Jarmond Davis, 45, of 209 Belleview blvd., Alexandria, pilot; L. L. Porter, 28, 109 Farmington Drive, Alexandria, copilot.

A body believed that of Mrs. William Chertow, of Brooklyn, was taken to the morgue, and a body of a man, identified as Neville Lassiter, 2310 S. Columbus st. Arlington, was dug out of the wreckage at 12:15 a. m.

Majority Critically Hurt

The plane had 20 passengers and a crew of three. The 19 survivors were taken off by boats of the Bolling Air Force Base air-sea rescue unit across the river. They were all taken to the Bolling Base Hospital crash ward.

Of those in the hospital, seven were reported in critical condition at 2 a.m., seven in serious condition, and five in good condition.

The ship, flight 500 from Memphis, Tenn., by way of Norfolk, Va., was approaching National Airport in a dense fog.

Officials at the control tower at National Airport said the ship, approaching in a heavy fog, was using Instrument Landing System, and also being advised by the Ground Control Approach radar system.

Through the GCA, operators informed the pilot, they said, that he was off course to the right. At 8:41 p. m., they said, he drifted off the scope entirely. They tried to contact him by radio, but received no answer.

An Air Force corporal at Bolling Base, across the river and nearly a mile away, said he dimly saw the ship, heard its motors "gunned," and then heard the "boom" of a crash.

The Bolling rescue team went into action.

Guided by Cries

Crash boats went through the thick fog on the Potomac River surface within five minutes. Grounding on a mud bank, they put out rowboats which were guided by shouts of survivors on the wings.

Then, when the rowboatmen called, they went in close, one crash boat nosing its bow into a hole ripped wide open in one side of the ship.

Removal started with four crash boats. Five Bolling Field ambulances met the boats at the dock and transferred survivors to the crash ward at the hospital, which has long been held in readiness for emergency crash service.

Corpl. Kenneth Rutkowski, of the base rescue unit, saw the crash. He said the ship apparently was making a right turn across the Potomac River from the field, about 40 feet off the ground. He said the engines were suddenly "gunned," but the ship did not rise. In seconds, he heard a "boom," when the crash occurred.

The crash occurred near the place where an Eastern Airlines transport with 55 aboard crashed on November 1, killing all, after a midair collision with a P-33 plane, the pliot of which survived.

The ship was due here at 7:31 p. m., but was late. It was on a ground-control-approach radar scope at 8:30 p. m., when it suddenly went off the scope and disappeared in the rain and patchy fog.

Harbor police, airport crash trucks and other rescue facilities, fireboats, and the Bolling Base equipment immediately joined the search.

Considerable delay occurred before the ship was located by rescuers. Bolling Base crash boats were the first to reach the craft, and brought in the survivors.

Police sent out all available ambulances and emergency equipment, with a force of 23 motorcycle policemen to escort emergency vehicles to hospitals or elsewhere.

Capital Airlines officials said that this was the organization's first

Eyewitness Accounts Of Crash

Interior of the Capital Airlines DC-3 plane which crashed last night south of National Airport was a shambles of blood, bodies, and debris, members of the Bolling Air Force Base rescue force said.

They were the first to reach the smashed ship and took off 19 persons who were transferred to the Bolling Base Hospital crash ward.

First person at Bolling to give the alarm was Corpl. Kenneth Rutkowski of the air-sea rescue unit. He was walking from the dock to his barracks, he said, when he saw the ship in trouble and then crash.

He immediately summoned other members of the unit and the group sped into action.

Speed Through Fog

Four crash boats and launches sped across the Potomac through a dense fog. When the first crash boat neared the downed plane, its nose bumped into mud. Lieut Walter G. Kelley, officer in charge Boat Section Bolling Air Force Base, told this story as he returnd to the base.

"We were on the scene five minutes after the alarm. We could hear persons yelling, and that is the only way we found the plane, because of the dense fog

"The plane was resting on a sand bar in about 3 feet of water, a big hole in the port side.

"We brought the bow of one of the boats right into the hole. The majority of the people were standing on a wing. Some of them were still in the plane.

"The first boat took off most of the seriously injured. There were about 10 or 11 of them, one of them definitely dead. She was a woman, middle-aged, and bleeding from the face.

"We think two more are inside, and we're trying to get them out now.

"We heard yells of pain. Most

Hospital Tells Condition of Injured

Bolling Air Force Base Hospital officials made public a complete list of the 19 survivors of the Capital Airlines plane crash, at 2 a.m., together with their conditions. Seven were listed as critical, seven as serious, and five as in good condition.

Among those marked critical was Henry Grimes, about 37, a Liberian government communications official.

Grimes is assistant director of Liberia's government radio stations. George B. Stevenson, first secretary of the Liberian Embassy, said Grimes arrived at New York about two weeks ago on a special mission for the Liberian Government. From New York he left for a trip through the South, and was scheduled to arrive in Washington Father was Chief Justice.

Stevenson said Grimes' brother, Rudolph, was graduated from Howard University Law School last June, and is now in New York, taking postgraduate work at Columbia University. Grimes' father, L. A. Grimes, was Chief Justice of Liberia until his death two months ago.

In good condition was Joseph

3-Power Atom Pact Reports 'Premature'

By Alfred Friendly
Post Reporter

Sources close to the British-Canadian-United States atomic "partnership" negotiations yesterday characterized current reports of a three-power agreement as premature and exaggerated.

The talks have been suspended for 10 days or two weeks, it was learned, to give time to the governments involved to think over the various proposals. But in no sense can it be said conclusions have been agreed upon that are ready to be put before the President and Congress for their approval and for necessary action.

Still unresolved, it was learned, is the question of degree of atomic "weaponeering" to be conducted by the United Kingdom in the British Isles.

If it were possible, the United States would like to keep all manufacture of atomic weapons on this side of the Atlantic. It would invite British and Canadian scientists to participate in American bomb-making facilities, and would open up a much broader area of exchange of secret atomic information to its partners than has been the case since the end of the war.

From the British point of view, however, such an arrangement is not satisfactory, since it would completely stop atomic weapons research in the United Kingdom, and bar a sizable number of British scientists from continuing work in which they are now deeply involved.

A proposed compromise would leave the British free to carry on considerable research and experimentation with the several parts of the A-bomb, but would centralize actual production of all completed bombs in the United States.

The question still at issue seems to be: How much is "considerable?"

Persons who have been participating in the talks called the situation still "touchy." They said there were troublesome points still to be worked out before a "deal" could be presented to President Truman for his approval, and then to Congress.

American officials have promised that no commitments will be made without first clearing them thoroughly with Congress. It is probable that whatever form the agreement takes, congressional action will be necessary to carry it out.

This could take the form of a congressional resolution, amendments to the McMahon Atomic Energy Act, or, less likely, an international treaty.

Scarcity in 3 Factors

The negotiators have been obliged to keep several considerations in mind. United States officials have been primarily concerned with the question of the most efficient use of three scarce factors—uranium ore, manufacturing facilities and scientific brains.

They do not want to see Britain build needlessly duplicating facilities. They want to avoid a situation in the future that would find the United Kingdom and the United States competing for the supply of atomic ores. And finally, the United States feels very deeply the need of help, in the U. S. operations, of skilled British research and scientific minds.

Among the British considerations are political questions and "politics" questions.

With respect to the first, the British do not want to get in a situation where they would find themselves behind the parade and forced to start from scratch if a future wave of isolationism or non-cooperation in the U. S. put an end to promised "partnership."

With respect to "politics," the British government has a problem of prestige among its citizens. It fears the reaction that might follow an announcement that it has abandoned all work on weapons in its home territory.

An intimation of it came yesterday in the House of Commons, the Associated Press reported.

John Platts-Mills, an independent Labor member, asked the Minister of Supply:

"Is it not a fact that the Americans have told us quite positively that we are not to use the knowledge we have and we are not to be allowed to make the bombs?"

The Minister of Supply, George Strauss, in charge of Britain's atomic developments, refused to give a direct answer to the question.

Army Decides To Revive War College

The Army said yesterday it is reestablishing the Army War College. The first session will be held at Fort Leavenworth, Kans., pending selection of a permanent site.

The old Army War College at Washington was converted in 1946 into the National War College, which provides advanced graduate work for officers of the Army, Navy, Air Force and foreign service officers of the State Department.

Officers said reestablishment of the Army War College was found necessary to fill a gap in the Army educational system between the Command and Staff School at Fort Leavenworth and the National War College. The Navy and the Air Force already have their own war colleges.

The Army's announcement said an enrollment of 100 officers is expected for the 1950-1951 course. The starting date has not yet been fixed.

The course will last about 10 months. It will include instructions in the duties of the commanders and staffs of the higher Army echelons, such as an Army group, theater and Army headquarters, as well as duties at Army department headquarters.

Two-Hour Coal Parley Produces No Result

New York, Dec. 12 (AP).—The United Mine Workers and hard-coal operators negotiated for two hours today without results.

After the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel meeting, Thomas Kennedy, the union's top negotiator, said "We talked about everything—there was no change in the situation."

"The persuasive powers of both sides had no effect," reported Edward Griffith, head of the operators' negotiating committee.

nounced within two weeks after the selection board's decision.

Representative Leslie C. Arends, (R., Ill.), a member of the House Armed Services Committee, said:

"If Captain Burke's name remains eliminated from the list, then the committee should certainly look into the matter and I believe it will. The whole country will recall that all Navy officers who presented their views in the recent controversy or who had a part in preparing the Navy's case were promised that there would be no reprisals."

Representative W. Sterling Cole (R., N. Y.) recalled that Admiral Louis E. Denfeld was ousted as Chief of Naval Operations after he supported the views expressed by other naval officers in the unification fight.

"Now they've gone after Captain Burke," Cole said. "It is a terrible thing from the standpoint of the security of the country."

Catholic Children Barred From Sex Education Classes

St. Paul, Minn., Dec. 12 (AP).—Archbishop John Gregory Murray has barred the presence of Catholic children from classrooms of public or private schools where sex education is given.

In a pastoral letter read in most of the 283 churches of the archdiocese yesterday, the Archbishop denounced sex education in schools. He termined it "a subject to be reserved for personal discussion between parent and child, physician and patient, confessor and penitent."

The letter said Roman Catholic parents have a duty to withdraw their children from that portion of any class that professes to give instruction in sex.

Hague Pact Is Attacked By Ukraine

Lake Success, Dec. 12 (AP).—The Soviet Ukraine demanded tonight that the U. N. Security Council set up a new Indonesian commission including Russia. It rejected a Canadian resolution to extend the life of the present American-Belgian-Australian Commission for Indonesia and bitterly attacked the United States for its role in the Dutch-Indonesian conflict.

The bitter attack from the Ukraine indicated that the Soviet Union would veto an Indonesian bid for U. N. membership expected early in 1950.

The Ukraine speech was made by Andrew A. Galagan, who took the seat formerly held by Dmitri Z. Manuilsky, his Foreign Minister. Galagan went over in detail the charges often voiced by Manuilsky that the Dutch were cruel to the Indonesian people and that the United States and Britain helped the Dutch suppress the Indonesian movement for liberty.

Galagan's blast interrupted a parade of speeches congratulating the Indonesians and the Dutch on The Hague agreement which set up the new republic of the United States of Indonesia.

Gen. A. G. L. McNaughton of Canada, praised the agreement and formally put up a resolution indorsing it. He also urged the Council to extend the life of the U. N. Commission so it could help during the transitional period for the new republic.

Max C. Schwartz, real estate man, has been elected president of the Park View Businessmen's Association, it was announced yesterday. Schwartz was the first head of the organization when it was started 13 years ago. Also elected at a meeting in the City Bank, were Carl Lane, first vice president; Jack Hyman, second vice president; Adam Offenbacker, secretary; Jack Zoltrow, treasurer.

British Doctors Criticize Ewing's Statement

London, Dec. 12 (U.P.).—A group of 3000 British doctors said today that "grossly misleading" statements by United States Federal Security Administrator Oscar R. Ewing on the British health plan were made without his having visited "a single doctor's surgery."

The British Fellowship for Freedom in Medicine said Ewing's "laudatory" statement "is not the result of an impartial investigation but just another item in the Truman Administration's campaign for its own national health program."

The fellowship accused Ewing of making "a grossly misleading" statement when he charged that certain groups in organized American medicine were giving financial support to "diehard" British doctors "propagandizing" against the British health program.

Ewing made his controversial statements in a press conference last week after meeting with British health officials.

As for the contributions the fellowship received from American doctor's groups, the statement said:

"The financial contributions to which Mr. Ewing alluded are confined to a personal check for 50 pounds ($140) from the chairman of a medical society in Indiana and a check for $10 from the Association of American Physicians and Surgeons. These two gifts, which amount to less than 1 percent of the fellowship's income, were made as tokens of sympathy with its objects, and the description given them by Mr. Ewing can only be characterized as misleading."

Reds Charge Ward $7000 for Train Ride

During Uprising

Chang Flees From Reds In Kunming

Associated Press WIREPHOTO
CHANG CHUN
. . . Arrives in Hongkong

Hongkong, Dec. 12 (U.P.).—Former Premier Chang Chun and three Nationalist generals reportedly captured when Yunnan Province deserted to the Communists, arrived here unexpectedly today.

Chang said he did not even know a revolt was under way although he was present in Kunming during the entire incident.

Yunnan Province deserted to the Communists Friday night, reportedly through machinations of Gen. Lung Yun, former governor of the huge province and bitter opponent of Chiang Kai-shek.

Chang said he arrived Friday in Yunnan's capital of Kunming under instructions from the Generalissimo to try to persuade Governor Lu Han, a cousin of General Lung, from proceeding with the revolt.

He said he stayed at Lu's house overnight, but never got a chance to talk with him.

Lu on Friday night was host at a dinner for United States Consul LaRue Lutkins and a number of fliers of Maj. Gen. Claire Chennault's civil air transport. Lutkins and the fliers escaped Saturday.

Chang said he heard of the revolt Saturday afternoon and decided to depart immediately. He and the three group commanders with him were allowed to fly unhindered to Haiphong, Indo-China, where they spent the night.

Earlier reports said Chiang himself narrowly escaped capture at Kunming when he changed his plans to fly there and flew instead direct to Formosa, his island refuge, from Chengtu.

The fomer premier, who plans to fly on to Formosa, said as far as he knew, Chiang did not intend to resume the presidency of China.

The Communist radio reported tonight that the Nationalist commissioner in the far western province of Tsinghai had switched allegiance to the Communists and that Communist troops had captured the towns of Yushu, Chengtu and Nanghcien on the Tsinghai-Sikang provincial border.

Capture of the towns would leave Sikang—last Nationalist foothold on the mainland—open to Red invasion. The Nationalists set up guerilla headquarters in the province before fleeing from Chengtu to Formosa.

Pravda Accuses Smith of 'Slander' And 'Speculation'

Moscow, Dec. 12 (U.P.).—The official Soviet newspaper Pravda today accused Gen. Walter Bedell Smith of committing "slander" in his writings about life in Russia while he was United States Ambassador and accused him of "speculating" on the Moscow markets.

Pravda said the "small soul of the infantry diplomat stands revealed in his alleged living difficulties experienced in Moscow. He frets, for instance, because he did not receive enough eggs and Moscow drugstores did not supply sufficient naphthalene (mothballs).

"But the talkative former diplomat 'forgot' to report another intimate side of his life," Pravda said. "He said nothing about how, through his subordinates, he speculated on the Moscow markets with clothes, fountain pens, cigarettes and watches.

"Incidentally he needed the napthalene to preserve the heaps of goods which he and his colleagues dispatched from Moscow as result of the speculation."

Ex-War Prisoner of U. S. Returning to Preach

Atlanta, Dec. 12 (AP).—Heinz Booch expects to preach the Gospel in the land that once held him captive.

The 24-year-old former prisoner of war from the Afrika Corps returned today from his native Wildeshausen, in the British zone of Germany, to take a two-year ministerial course at Asbury College in Kentucky.

His return was arranged by the Rev. Robert B. Hays, civilian chaplain at a prisoner of war camp at Monticello, Ga. where Booch had been held.

Aboard Steamship Lakeland Victory off Taku Bar, China, Dec. 12 (U.P.).—U. S. Consul General Angus Ward today disclosed that the Chinese Communists charged him and 19 companions $7000 for a 400-mile train ride, with their baggage, from Mukden to Tientsin.

Safe aboard this freighter, under the American flag, after an ordeal of a year in Mukden, Ward spoke with contempt of the Communists for the treatment they gave him and his staff.

Awaiting the completion of cargo unloading so he could sail for Japan, Ward told of the train ride that cost $7000 in American money.

"We were whisked into the train after dark and not allowed even to see whether there were other cars," Ward said. "Nobody was permitted to stick his nose out of the car during the 40 hours of the trip."

The cars were fitted with wooden benches and without water.

Ward was asked to comment on the way the Communists acted after they captured Mukden October 30, 1948.

"I'll not express my opinion," Ward said. "But I will cite this fact which you can interpret for yourself:

"De facto relations actually existed between the consulate general and the Mukden city government up to November 20, 1948.

"Then, without warning, we received a message addressed by the Communists merely to the 'compound.' The same thing happened to the British the day before. They also had been maintaining de facto relations with the municipal Communist regime."

(The compound is the enclosure comprising the consulate general buildings.)

This action, he said, marked the beginning of a year-long period during which he was under house arrest—seldom permitted out of his compound even with an armed guard over him—and at the end of which he and four of his aides were arrested, held in jail under miserable conditions and given terms of imprisonment on trumped-up charges of assault. The sentences were remitted and Ward and his companions were ordered out of the country.

The Communist radio announced that the defendants had confessed assaulting a Chinese consulate general employe who demanded back pay. Ward said this was a lie.

Ward disclosed that one of the five—Frank Cicogna, an Italian hired in China—did sign a statement implying a confession. Cicogna did so, however, only after he was so weak and ill that "he had no knowledge later of having done so."

Ward said he and the four aides whom the Communists jailed were in relatively good health considering their treatment during their solitary confinement in underheated cells from October 24 to November 21. But each lost about 25 pounds because of the bread and hot water diet.

Chinese Worker's Injury Matter of 'Frustration'

Aboard Lakeland Victory, Dec. 12 (AP).—Consul General Angus Ward today gave this account of the difficulty that led to his "conviction" for beating a Chinese and his expulsion from Red China:

It began on Sept. 27, when a Chinese resigned as a Mukden consulate messenger.

Next day, the Chinese, Chi Yu-heng, came to get his pay. He was offered pay due for nine working days plus two months' severence pay. He refused it as insufficient.

On Oct. 11 Ward and Frank Cicogna, consulate radioman, found Chi hiding in a storeroom.

Ward took the Chinese by the hand to lead him downstairs when Chi suddenly grabbed Ward's coat with both hands. Ward removed one hand and asked Shiro Tatsumi, another employe, to hold it while he disengaged Chi's other hand.

Chi's brother suddenly appeared and began pounding Ward's neck and right shoulder.

Ralph Rehberg, consular administrative officer, pulled Chi's brother off. The brother retreated down another stairway and then rushed up the stairs down which Ward was leading Chi. He brandished a three-foot length of the two-by-four timber.

Ward let go of Chi, who scrambled to the iron stair rail and banged his own head against it twice.

"It was pure frustration," said Ward. "That's the only injury I saw inflicted on him at any time."

District Police Join Hunt for Missing Wife

Washington police are searching for a 26-year-old former Powers model missing from her Patuxent, Md., home since December 3.

She is Mrs. Elizabeth Jean Boyd, who was dressed in gray slacks and wearing a gray coat when she left her home. Her husband, Lieut. John Boyd, said Mrs. Boyd carried a revolver and a suitcase.

Lieut. Boyd, who returned five months ago from China, left yesterday for California with his 7-year-old son, Stephen. He is now assigned at Moffett Field, California.

At New Delhi

India, U. S. Open 10-Day Conference

New Delhi, India, Dec. 12 (AP).—An unofficial 10-day India-America conference opened here today, aimed at promoting better understanding and a common approach to problems of mutual concern.

Dr. Arthur H. Compton, chancellor of Washington University, St. Louis, heading the American delegation of 30 members, told the opening session United States foreign policy "works firmly toward a definite objective to maintain peace under such conditions that men and women can lead worthy lives."

Compton told the meeting India and the United States are the greatest of the world's democracies in population and thus have a "definite spiritual mission to fulfill in a disturbed world—establishing an enduring society of worthy men and women."

Spiritual Guide

"India always has been a land of romance and mystery to which one can look with confidence for spiritual guidance, and the creation of basic conditions in which individual men and women can live and grow to their fullest," Compton said.

The American Institute of Pacific Relations and the Indian Council of World Affairs are the joint sponsors of the conference.

Included in the American delegation are President Colgate W. Darden, jr., of the University of Virginia and Herbert Elliston, editor of The Washington Post.

Pandit H. N. Kunzru, president of the conference, said it represented "a nucleus around which a better understanding of the East and West can be evolved." Kunzru, president of the Indian Council of World Affairs, recently told reporters the council proposes to organize a Pacific confeence in which other countries of the Far East will take part.

The delegates here will examine political and diplomatic relations between India and America, including attitudes on world security, defense, trusteeships, human rights, immigration and the status of resident aliens and of nationals abroad. The group also will examine commercial and financial relations, including investments and United States technical aid to India. Cultural relations also are on the agenda.

GOP Heads OK Budget For '50 Fight

New York, Dec. 12 (AP).—The Republican Party's National Finance Committee today approved a $1,952,450 budget to conduct the 1950 election campaign.

Sinclair Weeks, committee chairman, made the announcement after a day-long closed meeting. The budget figure is an increase of $27,450 over the campaign fund for the 1946 election, when the Republicans gained control of Congress. They lost control two years later.

Weeks, Republican committeeman from Massachusetts, said the party would welcome "contributions in the $1 to $50 bracket."

Terming 1950 a crucial election year, Weeks said the budget sum "is expected to be sufficient to finance an effective, efficient and hard-hitting campaign in behalf of candidates."

He said the Republican Party is the "one bulwark" against the Democratic Administration's trend "down the dead-end road to socialism."

Also taking part in the meeting were Guy G. Gabrielson, National Committee head and Republican national chairman; Senator Owen Brewster of Maine, leader of the National Senatorial Committee; and Representative Leonard W. Hall of New York, chairman of the National Congressional Committee.

Others at the session were Carlton G. Ketchum of Pittsburgh, Pa., and Joseph Wishart of Nebraska.

The party chiefs leave by plane tonight for Chicago to attend the Republican strategy committee meeting tomorrow.

Among those at the strategy meeting will be Mrs. Howard Coffin, Washington, D. C.

Pope Hopes For Holy Year Conversions

Rome, Dec. 12 (NYHT).—Pope Pius XII said today one of his main hopes is that the 1950 Holy Year will inspire persons outside the Catholic Church to become members. He said the prayers and examples of pilgrims who visit Rome will be directed toward that purpose.

The pontiff spoke at a secret consistory of cardinals at which the prelates were given the formal announcement of the first event of the Holy Year, the opening of the Holy Door at St. Peter's on Christmas Eve.

Msgr. Sergio Pignedoli, secretary of the Holy Year Committee, told foreign correspondents that 671,143, grouped in 1408 pilgrimages from 38 countries, already have announced their intention to make the journey to Rome. He estimated at least one third more persons were planning to come.

The peak months will be April, when 104,398 pilgrims will be present, according to current committee statistics, and September, when there will be 113,698.

Free lodging will be given, according to an old custom, to all pilgrims who make the journey to Rome on foot. Monsignor Pignedoli said so many pilgrims were expected during the year that a limit has been set on the length of time they will be able to stay in facilities provided by the Vatican. The Vatican has contracted for 20,000 beds. Italians will be able to remain only three days; Europeans, 10 days, and pilgrims from overseas, 15 days, the monsignor said.

Czechs Move To Take Over Construction

Prague, Czechoslovakia, Dec. 12 (U.P.).—The Communist government today published a prospective law that would empower it to take over the construction industry.

The construction bill stated specifically that "private persons will have no more to do with building."

One section empowered the state to expropriate any private buildings whose owners refuse to make such state-ordered improvements as the installation of central heating.

The bill was distributed at the National Assembly for introduction and passage later. With it was another bill tightening state controls over books, movies and phonographs.

The construction bill said other owners whose buildings might be seized are those who refuse to comply with state regulations to promote public security, defense, transport, social welfare, health, travel, cultural development, protection of memorials and protection of the landscape.

Violators would be fined 100,000 crowns ($2000) and would face jail sentences up to six months.

World Bank Gives Aim in Bond Refund

President Eugene R. Black yesterday said the World Bank hopes to save some interest money by its forthcoming bond refunding. But, he said, that is not the bank's chief aim.

The main purpose, he told a news conference, is to replace the outstanding 100-million-dollar issue of 10-year, 2¼ percent bonds, due in 1957, with bonds that fall due serially over a period of years at a 10-million-dollar-a-year clip.

That will fit in better with the schedule of repayment on loans made by the Bank, making loan repayments available for use in paying off the new serial bonds as they come due.

Black repeated that the Bank's plans are to call in the outstanding issue of 2¼ percent bonds for payment about February 15 and to open bids for the new issue about February 1.

"We will not save much interest, if any," he said in observing that the Bank is not aiming primarily at lower interest.

He stressed instead the better link between maturities and loan repayments and that "we would like more clearly to ascertain what our credit is worth, now that we have a better picture of loans and amortizing" than when the present bonds were issued in 1947.

opment in the world." He said the survey would prepare the way for the day when Lebanon is technically ready to undertake a project of such scope.

3. Development of the Gilt Wadi (a wadi is a dry river bed) where by building a dam and carrying out reforestation the area of cultivable land could largely be increased in the Arab part of Palestine.

4. A similar six-million-dollar development of the Wadi Zerka in Hashemite Jordan. Several other wadis east of the Jordan lend themselves to similar treatment after the demonstration project in Wadi Zerka is carried out, it was pointed out.

5. A development to provide 4000 man-years of work in the worst refugee area—the sandy wastelands of Gaza on the Egyptian-occupied Palestine coast, where 232,000 Arab refugees are crammed together. This work, Clapp said, would be chiefly sand-dune fixation to preserve arable land as well as limited development of sub-soil wells. He said this presents one of the toughest problems, and direct relief probably must continue there for some time after works programs are under way elsewhere.

The U. N. General Assembly a week ago authorized a 54-million-dollar fund, donated by member governments, to carry out works relief among the refugees.

Clapp said the mission was recommending no projects for Israel. He said Israel has foreign sources for capital and a number of economic projects under way.

No projects were recommended for Egypt, because of that country's advanced economic development, nor for Syria and Lebanon in the hope they could arrange financing themselves.

U. S. Protests to Bulgaria Over Falsely Charging Envoy

lations between the two countries.

Webb asked Voutov to communicate the American protest to Sofia "immediately" and Voutov promised to do so.

Webb had Voutov on the carpet about 15 minutes. Then the State Department, in an unusual step, disclosed the contents of the conversation as soon as Voutov left—even before he could get back to his legation to write a formal report to his government.

The department said in a press release that the most recent actions of the Bulgarian government against Heath "are not an isolated development."

"For some time," the statement continued, "the United States Legation in Sofia has been subjected to a series of indignties and restrictions, including false charges against American officials, intimidation and persecuton of local Bulgaran employes, refusal to issue visas to personnel assigned to the legation, and various restrictions on travel and housing."

Voutov was called in today, the department said, in an effort to impress again upon the Bulgarian government the seriousness with which this Government views these actons."

It said the Bulgarian charges that Heath conspired with Kostov were "demonstrably false."

Correction Demanded

"It is a matter of public record that the alleged conversations between Minister Heath and Kostov never took place," the department said.

"On December 3 Heath requested the Foreign Office to use its good offices to have his personal denial of the veracity of the allegations published in the Bulgarian newspapers. He left an aide-memoire reminding the Bulgarian government of the seriousness with which the United States Government viewed his unwarranted and unfriendly action.

"Instead of complying with Mr. Heath's request, the Bulgarian government permitted the publication of the scurrilous articles in the press attacking the Department of State and Minister Heath and indicating to the Bulgarian public that the department had deliberately lied in stating that Mr. Heath had never seen Mr. Kostov or exchanged a word with him, written or oral."

The State Department said Webb told Voutov last night the charges against Heath "were patent falsehoods which the Bulgarian government could and had a duty to correct."

Death by Hanging Demanded for Kostov

By Dimiter Mishev

Sofia, Bulgaria, Dec. 12 (AP).—The death penalty by hanging was demanded today by state prosecutors for Traicho Kostov, former vice premier, and 10 codefendants charged with treason, spying and sabotage.

Kostov, Bulgaria's No. 2 Communist, was accused of having plotted with Premier Marshal Tito of Yugoslavia and with British and American "imperailists" to pull Bulgaria out of the Soviet sphere and annex it to Yugoslavia in an anti-Soviet bloc.

Kostov had repudiated in court portions of his pretrial confession to police. The state countered through his codefendants who testified against him.

Two prosecutors for three hours bitterly assailed "Anglo-American imperialism" and Marshal Tito as the real masters of Kostov and his codefendants.

"The Anglo-Americans," Prosecutor Bilchev declared, "have been attempting to use the Balkans as a stronghold for aggression against the Soviet Union."

Bilchev charged Britain and the United States had "directed and assisted all plotting and conspiracies here." . . .

He claimed the defendants' actions were "not isolated, but parts of a complex web of criminality over a period of years—including treason, espionage, sabotage and wrecking."

Defense counsel are expected to speak Tuesday. The verdicts may come Wednesday or Thursday.

Two Charged With Gaming In County Raid

Prince Georges County police, converging on a Coral Hills bungalow from three directions, raided an alleged gambling spot yesterday and charged the two occupants with setting up a gaming table.

About $400 in cash, a pile of numbers and racing slips, four telephones and a radio broadcasting race results were found on the main floor of the house at 5201 R st., Coral Hills.

John Hathaway Fish, 40, 2117 4th st. nw., and Vincent Briguglio, 34, 827 49th ave., Capitol Heights, Md., were released on $500 bond each for a hearing December 19 on the gaming charge. The hearing will be before Trial Magistrate Alan Bowie in Upper Marlboro Police Court.

The bungalow, located just outside the District on Marlboro pike, was raided between 4:30 and 5 p. m. by a six-man party headed by Lieut. Elon A. Turner, head of the Upper Marlboro unit of Prince Georges police. The spot had been watched for a week and a search warrant had been obtained, police said.

Rain Cuts Art Show Attendance

Attendance at the exhibit of Austrian-owned art treasures at the National Gallery of Art yesterday dropped to a low of 3008 persons.

The combination of a Monday and rain was blamed by gallery officials for the lowest day's attendance figure since the exhibit opened November 20. Including yesterday's attendance, 351,556 persons have visited the collection.

Vermeer's painting, "The Artist in his Studio," which is in the exhibit, is the gallery's "picture of the week," and the subject of 12:30 and 2:30 p. m. talks daily by Miss Elisabeth Pucket, lecturer. Miss Lois A. Bingham, another lecturer, is speaking on early sixteenth century Venetian paintings in the Austrian collection, in the 11:30 a. m. daily tour for the week.

Visiting hours are 10 a. m. to 5 p. m. week days, and 2 to 10 p. m. Sundays.

Landslide Indicated In Australian Vote

Sydney, Australia, Dec. 12 (AP).—The Labor government's defeat in Saturday's election neared landslide proportions today.

The victorious Liberal-Country Party coalition will have a majority of 27 to 29 votes in the new Australian lower chamber (House of Representatives).

The coalition's lead over the defeated Labor Party gained as more votes were counted. The final count is not expected to be completed for the lower house until the end of this week or early next week. Several hundred thousand votes are still to be tallied.

The progress count indicates the Liberal-Country forces will have 74 or 75 seats in the new house of 121 voting members. Labor likely will have 46 or 47 seats. In addition, Labor may win two seats for the Northern Territory and Canberra, the capital district. These two representatives can vote only on matters affecting their areas.

Australian people are taking little interest in the count of votes for the Senate, which is almost certain to retain its Labor majority. Few people, however, believe that a Labor-controlled Senate would block legislation backed by the new government.

Incoming Prime Minister Robert G. Menzies was expected to select his cabinet and take over from Prime Minister Joseph B. Chifley next Monday or Tuesday. The new Parliament will meet the second week in February.

The leader of the Country Party, Arthur W. Fadden, is slated to be Deputy Prime Minister. Richard G. Casey, veteran Australian diplomat and his country's first minister to the United States, was a likely choice to succeed Minister of External Affairs Herbert V. Evatt.

Coffee Trade Expert Sees No Shortage

By The Associated Press

A representative of the coffee trade yesterday expressed the belief there is no real shortage of coffee.

He is W. F. Williamson, New York, manager of the National Coffee Association, who also told a Senate Agriculture Subcommittee it was his "personal guess that nobody rigged the market" to drive prices up.

Under questioning by Chairman Gillette (D., Iowa), who called the coffee situation "confusing," Williamson said:

"I think there is no shortage of coffee and I think there will be none. However, coffee is short enough to be susceptible to speculative influences. But there is nothing to indicate there will be an actual shortage of coffee."

Gillette responded:

"But somebody is profiting tremendously in this sudden price upturn. Somebody, somewhere, somehow has rigged the market so that the American public is charged double in the last few weeks."

"It is my personal guess," Williamson replied, "that nobody rigged the market, but some people took advantage of it. "I do not believe anyone was smart enough or strong enough to create the situation."

Gillette said there "seems to be clear evidence" that some stories about an impending coffee shortage "had been planted" to cause prices to jump.

Williamson said his organization, to which most of the trade belongs, had been telling consumers there would be enough coffee. However, he added, the housewife buying of extra coffee supplies "was a big factor in pushing prices up."

Group Appointed To Advise D. C. on Electrical Code

The Commissioners yesterday named a committee to advise them on proposed changes in the electrical code and electrical licensing and bonding regulations.

Committee members were appointed for a term to end December 31, 1950, and will serve without compensation.

Named to represent industry and labor are Walter Kolb, Electrical Contractors Association; Paul G. Dietrik, National Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, Local 26, and L. T. Souder, National Electrical Contractors Association. Representing the District are June S. Zebley, Frank Stetka and E. Brooke Pety of the department of inspection.

Loans Favored

Marshall Plan End Is Urged By Ferguson

Liquidation of the Marshall Plan and gradual creation in its stead of a system of RFC loans to private industries in ECA countries was urged yesterday by Senator Homer F. Ferguson (R., Mich.).

Just back from a tour of Europe and parts of Asia, the senator told reporters the trend of the Marshall Plan is "in the wrong direction."

The effect of the program, he said, has been to encourage Socialist governments in Western Europe and "socialism all over the world."

He proposed that the ECA program, which will terminate in 1952 in any event, be reconverted as quickly as possible to a program of direct loans from United States Government agencies to private business and industry in countries requiring continued aid.

Ferguson, who later talked to ECA Administrator Paul Hoffman about it, urged an early resurvey of all ECA projects "to see how many can be transferred to a loan basis."

The Michigan Republican said he was not proposing that the United States walk out on any of its ECA commitments, that those projects that couldn't be "transferred" would still be completed.

Under his direct loan, proposal, he said, private enterprise in friendly countries would be aided and the governments themselves largely "by passed." That way, he said, more money would go into business recovery channels, it would cost us less, and ultimately the money would be repaid.

Under the present system, he charged, the governments concerned "discriminate" against private enterprise and foster mainly those industries which are nationalized.

"Next Step to Communism"

"The effect of the ECA operation has been to socialize and nationalize these countries, and that's the next step to communism," Ferguson said.

Turning to the other side of the world, Ferguson said he favors sending U. S. troops to Formosa if necessary to prevent its conquest by Red Chinese armies.

But he added that he did not think troops would be necessary if the United States would state publicly that Formosa should be considered a part of the Japanese empire and should not be disturbed until a Japanese peace treaty is signed.

He said he would leave Generalissimo Chiang-shek's Chinese Nationalist government in control of Formosa as the representative of the United Nations until a Japanese treaty is signed.

Ferguson said he had discussed the Far Eastern situation with Gen. Douglas MacArthur, supreme U. S. commander in Japan, and is satisfied that MacArtnur's views coincided with his on the high strategic importance of Formosa to United States Pacific defenses.

'Supremacy' Champion's Fund Loses Tax Exemption

The Internal Revenue Bureau yesterday announced it has revoked a trust fund tax exemption granted to Judge George W. Armstrong, Mississippi oil millionnaire who wants to use his wealth to propagate white supremacy.

Armstrong ansounced he would donate the money instead to the Judge George W. Armstrong trust fund, chartered several years ago for "educational and religious purposes."

A Revenue Bureau spokesman said a tax exemption was granted to the trust fund "some years ago." While he refused to discuss the reasons for revoking it, he said such tax privileges are always subject to review and revocation.

One of the conditions on which such exemptions are granted, he said, is that the trust funds will not be used to propagandize or lobby.

Acalotti Defense Rests; Bribery Is Denied

with whom Acalotti once lived, and two other corroborating Government witnesses, Miss Ruth Ensor and Mrs. Nola Andrews, both waitresses and friends of Acalotti, who live together at 1223 12th st. nw.

Prosecutor William Hitz urged the jury to believe the three women when they said Acalotti threatened on March 4 to "bash in" Miss Franklin's face. Miss Franklin testified Acalotti threatened to "shut her mouth permanently" on March 25.

"You won't find Sunday School teachers or welfare workers living with Acalotti for almost a year," he said. "These are the only witnesses."

Rebutting Ford's summation, Assistant Prosecutor Edward L. Carey told the jurors, "These characters Mr. Ford sees fit to beat into the ground; the defendant saw fit to live with one, consort with another, and use the apartment of a third. Mr. Ford at one time represented two of them."

"Let's make it necessary for them to hold a special election at Thomas circle," Carey asked the jury. "Let's make them elect a new mayor."

The three policemen appearing as defense witnesses were Detective Sergt. Charles Burns of the robbery squad, formerly of the Second Precinct, Sergt. Arthur E. Fredette of No. 2, and Pvt. Kenneth A. Winters, also of the Second Precinct. Miss Franklin testified she saw Acalotti pay off Burns and Fredette. She said Winters was one of Till's "associates" in his gambling activities.

All policemen denied getting payoffs. All said they knew Acalotti. Only Fredette admitted he knew the pretty Government witness, who used to be a waitress in a Thomas circle restaurant, located in No. 2 Precinct.

Ford made Miss Franklin stand and asked Burns if he knew her.

"No, sir," he replied.

After Burns had identified Acalotti, Ford asked him, "At any time did you receive a payoff from him in connection with his activities?"

"No, sir," Burns replied.

After Fredette had identified both Acalotti and Miss Franklin, Ford asked him "Did you ever take a payoff of any kind from this man?"

"No sir," he replied.

Winters identified Acalotti but not Miss Franklin.

"Did you arrest him once on a bootlegging charge?" Ford asked.

"I have arrested him," Winters replied, "but not on that charge."

"What charge?"

"A disorderly charge."

When Ford turned Winters over for cross-examination without asking the $64 "pay-off" question, Judge Alexander Holtzoff interrupted to ask "What is the purpose of this testimony?"

"Oh, excuse me your honor," Ford answered and then asked Winters, "At any time did he make a payoff to you."

"No, sir," Winters replied.

Before the policeman took the stand, Judge Holtzoff said to the jury: "The court wishes to state while there is considerable doubt that such testimony is admissible, nevertheless, in justification to the police officers named by Bernice Franklin, the court will permit each of the policemen named by Bernice Franklin to be called as defense witnesses to make any statement they wish in regard to the accusations."

Two other officers named by Miss Franklin did not appear. One was "Detective John McCarthy," who, she said, was an associate of Acalotti, and one she identified only as "Private Morrison." Ford told Judge Holtzoff that police records indicated there was no such officer as Private Morrison.

Under cross-examination, Hitz explored the association between each of the officers and Acalotti.

"How long have you known the defendant," he asked Burns.

"Between five and seven years."

"Always in the Thomas Circle area?"

"Yes, sir."

"Did you know his business?"

"I knew he sold papers."

"Did you ever know he sold whisky?"

"I never saw him sell whisky, but I understood he sold it."

"Did you ever see Acalotti and Miss Franklin in a Cadillac parked near the circle?"

"I have seen Acalotti and a woman in the Cadillac, but I couldn't identify her."

"Have you ever driven up by that parked car?"

"No, sir."

"Isn't it a fact that you would regularly drive up to that Cadillac and Acalotti would hand you a roll of 30 dollar bills? . . ."

"That's not true."

"Even when you were in the scout car?"

"That is not true."

Never Saw Whisky Sold

"I have never seen him selling whisky or with a pint in his possession," Fredette replied.

"How long have you known Bernice Franklin?" Hitz asked.

"I'm not positive whether it is since the spring of 1948 or the fall of 1947.

"Did you speak to her?"

"I have spoken to her."

"Isn't it true that on many occasions in an alley behind the drugstore at Thomas circle you would meet Acalotti with Miss Franklin and receive approximately $10 per week?"

"No, sir," Fredette answered.

Cross-examining Winters, Hitz asked him "Did you know Acalotti also to conduct a gambling business at his apartment?"

"No."

Objection Overruled

"On August 6, 1948, did anything unusual occur to you?" Hitz asked. Ford objected and was overruled.

"What is your badge number?" Hitz asked Winters.

"697."

"Isn't it true that your badge number hit on that day?"

"Not to my knowledge."

"Didn't you have a bet of 50 cents on it and get paid $350 by Acalotti? Did you not . . .

"No."

". . . have a standing bet on this number with him?"

"No."

"What is your nickname? Fatboy?"

"I have been called that, yes, sir."

Doesn't Recall Conversation

"Do you recall one time about 11 in the morning you saw Acalotti and Bernice Franklin walking on the street, and later in the day you called Acalotti and spoke to Bernice and tried to place some numbers bets, and she said she did not know you by the name of Fatboy, and you said 'I just passed you on the street. I'm short, dark and fat' "?

"No sir," Winters replied.

"Can you explain how your name and telephone numbers appear in the telephone records of Till Acalotti?"

"No, sir." Ford objected to the question, and was sustained. Judge Holtzoff told Hitz "there is no evidence that it does."

Ford also called Charles D. Seaton, night clerk at Peoples Drugstore at Thomas Circle, as a witness. He testified that he had taken a message from a woman who gave her name as "Bernice" on March 24. The woman asked him to have Alcott call her, Seaton said.

Hitz called Ford's law associate, H. Clifford Allder, briefly as a rebuttal witness.

In his summation, Ford concentrated on the character of the three women called by the Government. "If each of you can believe those three types of witness, I'll agree that the Government has made a case."

"Those three characters may have you on their list," he told the jurors and Hitz and Carey. "They may, even on Christmas morn, get up thinking of ways to besmirch your fine records."

Ford's voice reached a full roar speaking about Miss Franklin and her six children. She testified that she left her husband and children at the advice of the Prince Georges County Board of Public Welfare.

"We have many frailties," he said. "Me, too, perhaps more than most. But a mother who prefers living in adultery to her own children, is the worst person. Not even a snake will leave its own children. She who will leave her own children can't tell the truth. There is nothing decent in her."

Ford also criticized Miss Franklin for taking her story last February to The Washington Post instead of to authorities.

He also asked the jurors to wonder why the Government did not produce "Jimmy," the janitor who, Miss Franklin testified, called Acalotti to the telephone on March 4 at her instructions.

Carey, in rebutting Ford, told the jurors that Jimmy was not called because "as a matter of law his testimony would have been inadmissible."

"Speaking of 'Where is Jimmy,' Carey said, 'where is detective McCarthy? Where is Herman Cohen?" Miss Franklin testified that Acalotti regularly settled his gambling debts in the office of Herman Cohen, street sales manager of the Washington Times-Herald.

Concerning the affidavit Miss Franklin made in May for the Times-Herald, Carey asked "What interest does the Times-Herald have in this matter? What was the Times-Herald trying to protect? Were they worried about Herman Cohen? What was one of the seven owners of the paper doing up at 2 or 3 o'clock in the morning and saying to her "you are doing a good job" in signing the affidavit? Who were they trying to "protect?"

Judge Holtzoff interrupted Carey at this point and told the jury that the newspapers were not being tried.

Judge Holtzoff told the jury he would deliver his charge to them this morning.

Assault Victim Still in Coma, Home 'Protector' Freed in Bail

A Gaithersburg (Md.) man was released in $1000 bond yesterday on charges of assault with intent to murder another man who has been in a coma in Suburban Hospital, Bethesda, since last Thursday night.

The victim was Ernest Norris, 36, also of Gaithersburg. According to Montgomery County police, he went to the home of Mr. and Mrs. Howard F. Selby last Thursday night. Later that night he was found by his wife, Hazel, beaten and hanging over a fence near his home.

After police questioned Mr. and Mrs. Selby, they arrested and charged Selby. They said Selby admitted hitting Norris with a piece of stovewood because of Norris' alleged attentions to Mrs. Selby and her daughter. Hearing was set for Rockville Police Court on January 6.

Business Tax Law Loophole Revealed

The United States Court of Appeals declared yesterday it is "striking" that nonresidents are not taxed on all income they receive from sources within the District of Columbia.

The court made the statement in interpreting the Franchise Tax passed here by Congress in 1947. The decision exempts from tax liability $36,000 yearly received by a Californian from the lease of the Hotel Lafayette.

Appeals Court Judge E. Barrett Prettyman said that since the lessor, Roy H. Pickford, kept no control over the hotel's business, he need not pay taxes on income he receives from it. The court agreed he must pay the 5 percent franchise tax on an apartment house here which he owns and operates as an "unincorporated business."

Judge Prettyman stated:

"It is striking that this act (District of Columbia Revenue Act of 1947) does not levy a tax upon nonresident individuals generally upon income from sources within the District, as the Federal income tax law and the laws of many States do in respect to non-residents of their respective jurisdictions . . . There is a broad definition of resident, but, outside the borders of that definition, non-residents seem to be untaxed except by way of the franchise upon 'unincorporated business'."

It was admitted that the apartment house was an unincorporated business but the dispute was over the hotel. Here, the court ruled that it was not a "business" so far as Pickford was concerned because he had no control over it nor held any stock or other such interest.

The District government argued that when a non-resident operates a taxable unincorporated business he must also pay taxes on all other income received here. The Appeals Court rejected this interpretation, ruling that where a lessor merely collects a rental from his lessee, the lessor is not doing business, under the tax statute.

"It seems clear for present purposes that activity, or lack of it, which is 'not doing business' is not a 'business,'" said Prettyman.

Pickford was represented by Attorneys Frederic N. Towers and Norman B. Frost. The District was represented by Corporation Counsel Vernon E. West and Assistant Corporation Counsels George C. Updegraff and Chester H. Gray.

District officials declined to estimate the amount of revenue the decision will cost the city but said they expect numerous refund applications to be filed. Decision on these will be made after a study of each application in light of the court's decision in the Pickford case.

Day-Long Session

State Asked For Fairfax Street Aid

The Fairfax County Board of Supervisors yesterday tussled with the problem of getting county subdivision streets into the Virginia State secondary system for maintenance.

At the end of the day-long session, the board asked the State Highway Commission to take into the secondary system "forthwith" all subdivision streets now built to the specifications of the county ordinance.

The board also asked the commission to set up a policy that would in the future automatically place streets in the secondary system on completion of construction, provided they meet the requirements of the county ordinance.

The county heads, after a special session with real estate developers, also agreed that streets must be 20 feet wide from now on, instead of 18, to conform with State rules for acceptance into the secondary system.

Black-topping of subdivision roads—called for in State highway policy—was okayed by the supervisors at developments where lots are up to and including one half acre in size. This would include most urban developments.

The supervisors also passed a resolution asking the highway department to use the number of vehicles registered — county-by-county—as a factor in alloting funds for road maintenance.

In other business, they set up county-wide reassessment of all property for 1950, with the results to be applied to 1951 tax bills.

The reassessment will be carried out by specialists of the State Department of Taxation. Some 37,000 to 40,000 parcels of land are involved. The county's last reassessment was in 1946. Estimated assessed value of Fairfax presently is around 60 million dollars.

Transit Contract Arbitration Off Until Friday

The five-man arbitration board considering issues between the Capital Transit Co. and its union employes will begin executive sessions Friday at 9:30 a. m. at the Statler Hotel.

Scheduled to begin yesterday, the first meeting was postponed because one of the board members is tied up in another arbitration in Syracuse, N. Y., Chairman Alfred A. Colby said.

He said the board hopes to complete its task early next week. The union has asked for a 25 cent an hour wage increase and changes in working conditions.

Ohio Relics Of Vikings Rejected

A Smithsonian Institution rejected a Washington man's story of finding evidence that Vikings lived in Ohio prior to the arrival of Columbus.

Ralph S. Solecki, an Institution staff member, said the relics probably dated back to the early 1800's and had nothing to do with the Vikings. Arlington H. Mallery of 2003 O st. nw., claimed that they went back to a Viking expedition.

Mallery, a consulting industrial and structural engineer with metallurgical research and archeology as his hobbies, found the evidence west of Chillicothe, in Ross County, Ohio.

Solecki's report said some of the relics found by Mallery were probably lime pits dating to about 1835.

Solecki also disputed Mallery's contention that he had found the site of Viking iron furnaces in the vicinity of Spruce Hill, near Bournsville, Ohio. Solecki said those pits date back to a Gen. Nathaniel Massie, who died in 1813.

He said also that Mallery had mistaken the remains of Indian signal fires for relics of an ancient Viking camp site.

Dr. Frank H. Roberts, director of the Bureau of American Ethnology's River Basin Survey, said that no investigation has been made of Mallery's claim that Viking remains were found near Clarksville, Va.

Man Dead in Auto

The body of Charles deHaahn of 118 Mankin walk, Falls Church, was found by Motorcycle Patrolman Elmer L. Redmond yesterday in a parked car at N. 16th st. near Arlington Ridge rd.

The body was taken to Arlington Hospital where an autopsy showed deHaahn, who was unemployed, died of natural causes.

though 15 million such blanks and matching envelopes were printed, only 190,000 were used out of 38 million families. Now census is planning to print about the same number of blanks for 1950, although the income question is to be asked only every fifth person.

Census is obviously unhappy over the clamor, the expense of printing the millions of additional forms at a cost of several thousands of dollars and the big job of matching the forms mailed in to the census sheets. Census feels certain of its legal authority for asking about family incomes, however, and a statement on this angle also may be forthcoming today.

The census announcement may or may not appear over Secretary of Commerce Charles Sawyer's signature. Ten years ago another Secretary was defending the income questions—Harry L. Hopkins.

In 1940 the census taker asked each household how much the head of the family took in in wages and salaries and also if he received $50 or more "from sources other than money, wages or salary." In 1950 the census taker will want to know not only about wages and salaries ut also about business, professional, and farm incomes and interest, dividends, pensions and rents.

While the 1950 census blank does not show any limitation on the question, census officials say those making over $10,000 a year will not have to give details. This was due, it was explained yesterday, to the availability of Internal Revenue statistics on higher income families through income tax returns.

But census wants a 20 percent—one in five—sample from the rest of the public over 14 years of age. It says these figures are eagerly sought by business groups. No details are to be made public for any individual but figures will be released for cities, counties and other municipal units. Hence the large sample for accuracy.

The 23 Republican Congressmen who protested Sunday to Census Chief Philip M. Hauser talked about a "Paul Pry" invasion of privacy and "raw injustice" to low-income workers.

Hauser yesterday turned the other cheek in a speech to the first of the 1950 census workers starting a two-weeks course here. They, in turn, will teach others.

Hauser said that despite the attacks in 1940 "nearly everyone cooperated beautifully." He added that "on the record, we have very little to be alarmed about."

The census chief referred to the fines and imprisonments which can be enforced against those who refuse to answer the census taker, adding:

"I don't want anyone waving the law and penalties in anybody's face. The law has been on the statute books for over 100 years but it's rarely been needed. The American public is highly cooperative."

He didn't mention Republican Congressmen, however.

D.C. 'No Man's Land' Has Parking Room

Did you fume yesterday when you searched vainly for a downtown parking spot?

That frustration might be avoided for 5000 motorists each day if "public space"—the no man's land between building line and sidewalk—could be used for parking instead of growing weeds.

Take, for example, the George Washington University parking lot at the triangle bounded by Washington Circle, New Hampshire ave., K and 24th sts. nw. The present capacity of 80 cars could be almost doubled if the weed-covered strips ringing the lot were available.

Strips of "public space" ranging in width from 11 to 33 feet lie between the lot and a 10-foot sidewalk.

At City-Owned Lot

Another example is the city-owned lot at 6th st. and Indiana ave. nw. A piece of land 40 feet wide extends for 325 feet along Indiana ave. between the building line and the sidewalk, but lot operators may not put cars there. Only use of the area is as a flourishing weed garden. About 80 vehicles could be parked there.

P. Y. K. Howat, while chairman of the Motor Vehicle Parking Agency, told city officials over and over again that 5000 more car spaces could be added to the downtown parking total if some way could be found to permit "controlled and limited parking of autos" in these lost strips.

The new parking agency chairman, Charles M. Upham, holds the same view, stipulating that parking must not "destroy esthetic values.

Traffic Board Idea

New life was given the parking proposal the other day when the Commissioners' Traffiic Advisory Board recommended that public space parking be permitted. Brig. Gen. Gordon R. Young, Engineer Commissioner, said yesterday he is studying the proposal.

Last August, however, the Commissioners adopted an opinion by Corporation Counsel Vernon E. West that city officials did not have "authority to permit the conduct of a parking lot in the area between the building line and the property line of land abutting upon a street."

City officials have said informally that this means the change is up to Congress.

The "public space" was created by L'Enfant's original plan for Washington, requiring the dedication of broad rights of way along streets for use as future roadways and sidewalks.

In areas zoned commercial or industrial, the "public space" may be paved from sidewalk to building, but in residential sections it becomes part of the homeowner's lawn, except for legal and tax purposes.

In some cases residents are parking illegally on "public space" when they pull the family car into the driveway, if it is located between the building line and sidewalk.

Police enforcement of such violations has proved difficult, and actions have been rare. Officers usually would need real estate plats and surveying instruments to determine just where the public space begins.

There's Room for 80 More Cars . . .

Reds Report Finding Rachmaninoff Works

Moscow, Dec. 12 (AP).—The publication Soviet Art says three hitherto-unknown works of the late Russian composer Sergei Rachmaninoff have been found and published here.

The three compositions, called Youthful Nocturnes for Piano, were discovered, the periodical said, in possession of a professor of the Moscow Music School who had been given the manuscripts by Rachmaninoff's own music teacher at the Moscow Conservatory.

Plainclothes Squad On Guard in Stores

Mother Gone

4 Starving Children Fed By Policeman

Willie Worrell, aged 10, can cook; his mother taught him how.

But yesterday, there wasn't anything in the house to cook, and three smaller Worrells—and Willie—were hungry.

Their plight was discovered by Pvt. Rudolph King, Fourteenth Precinct policeman, who investigated the Worrell apartment at 405 50th st. ne. after a neighbor reported hearing children crying.

Willie told him he had cooked—pork and beans, fat back, spaghetti—but that there wasn't any food left. King went out and rustled up some food—eggs, milk, bread—and fed the children. Later, a policewoman came and took the children to the Industrial Home School Annex for temporary shelter and three squares a day.

Police learned that Mrs. Etta Worrell had left the apartment last Friday. She returned Sunday night, briefly, and again early yesterday morning, when she took the youngest, Sylvia, 8 months old.

Willie said his mother was going to take Sylvia to the hospital, but a later check revealed that no woman answering Mrs. Worrell's description had applied at any local hospital.

Public safety officials in Washington have launched special protection measures for the city during the heavy Christmas shopping season as well as the entire holiday celebration period, they disclosed yesterday.

The Police Department has assigned a special detail of plainclothes officers, both men and women, to downtown stores to prevent shoplifting and purse-snatching. They declined to disclose the number but said that many have been taken out of uniform, and from other plainclothes assignments, to augment the regular squad.

In addition a force of 34 men from the Police rookie school have been assigned since December 2 to assist in handling traffic at the 19 downtown intersections regularly covered by officers, and at a number of others.

All these police will work six days a week until Christmas.

The Department of Vehicles and Traffic has begun erection of several hundred special "No Parking, 2 a. m. to 7 a. m." signs on downtown streets and important outlying streets. These are designed to aid in snow removal, if and when heavy snowfalls come.

They are effective seven days a week, including holidays. They do not forbid commercial vehicles from loading and unloading during the prohibited parking times, or forbid other vehicles from standing, so long as a driver is behind the wheel, officials said. These signs are effective by law from December 15 to March 15.

Fire Chief Joseph A. Mayhew issued a list of precautions he urged every householder to take to prevent fires during the holiday season.

64 Teachers Protest to Board Against New Sick Leave Rules

The faculty of Armstrong High School yesterday told the Board of Education that the present sick and emergency leave program is "detrimental to the teacher's health and morale."

In a letter to the board, the 64 faculty members urged that a group of teacher representatives confer with school administrators on modification of present practices.

The teachers objected to interpretation of a law put into effect for the first time this year which grants them paid sick and emergency leave. Before teachers were forced to pay their own substitutes when absent.

Specifically, the teachers protested a regulation which requires them to have a doctor's certificate for short illnesses. Other complaints registered by the teachers were:

A requirement that they justify in writing all absences of an emergency nature. The teachers declared this "offensive to the teacher's sense of dignity and his self-respect."

Limitation of leave in case of death to "death in the household." The teachers said this means that an employe could not obtain leave to go to the funeral of his mother or father in another city.

A requirement that a teacher on leave without pay on Friday and Monday be required to lose two days pay for Saturday and Sunday. The teachers said no provision is made for leave for personal business.

"It is not a customary American practice to question the individual's reason for every absence from work," the teachers said.

Officials to Discuss Razing D. C. Buildings

Plans to raze several buildings on the south side of the 400 block of C st. nw., now used for storage by the District government, will be discussed at a meeting called by the Commissioners at 10 a. m. Thursday. The space will be rented for a parking lot.

Paul Chalupsky, property survey officer; William A. Xanten, sanitary superintendent, and Maj. Robert J. Barrett, superintendent of police, will confer with the Commissioners.

1949 Rent Control Law Upheld

Court has made so prompt a ruling." He said the reference to the 1948 decision indicates the Court believes the wartime housing shortage "still exists."

In other actions yesterday the Supreme Court:

1. Refused, 5 to 3, to consider an Idaho Supreme Court decision outlawing picketing of a business which is not directly concerned in a labor dispute. Three justices — Black, Reed and Burton — said they favored hearing the case. Justice Douglas, still recuperating from his accident, did not participate.

2. Agreed to consider two other labor cases. One involves a Michigan law barring a strike without approval of the majority of the entire collective bargaining unit involved. The other involved a Wisconsin ruling forbidding any labor practice prohibited by Federal law. Relations between the National Labor Relations Board and State labor laws are involved in both cases.

3. Voted, 7 to 1, that insurance firms have the right to sue the United States in their own names when they seek to recover money paid out to persons injured through negligence of Government employes. Justice Black dissented. Chief Justice Vinson delivered the ruling in four cases involving four insurance companies.

4. Ruled, 7 to 0, that the Government can tax tickets to a public bathing beach such as that at Wilmette, Ill., on Lake Michigan.

5. Sent back to the Court of Claims a dispute over "just compensation" by the Government for a ship requisitioned in 1942 from a Great Lakes firm. Justice Clark, for the Court, declared the usual "fair market value" method of valuation could not apply in this case.

The Court will conclude hearing cases for 1949 by tomorrow or Thursday, meet again next Monday and then recess until January 9.

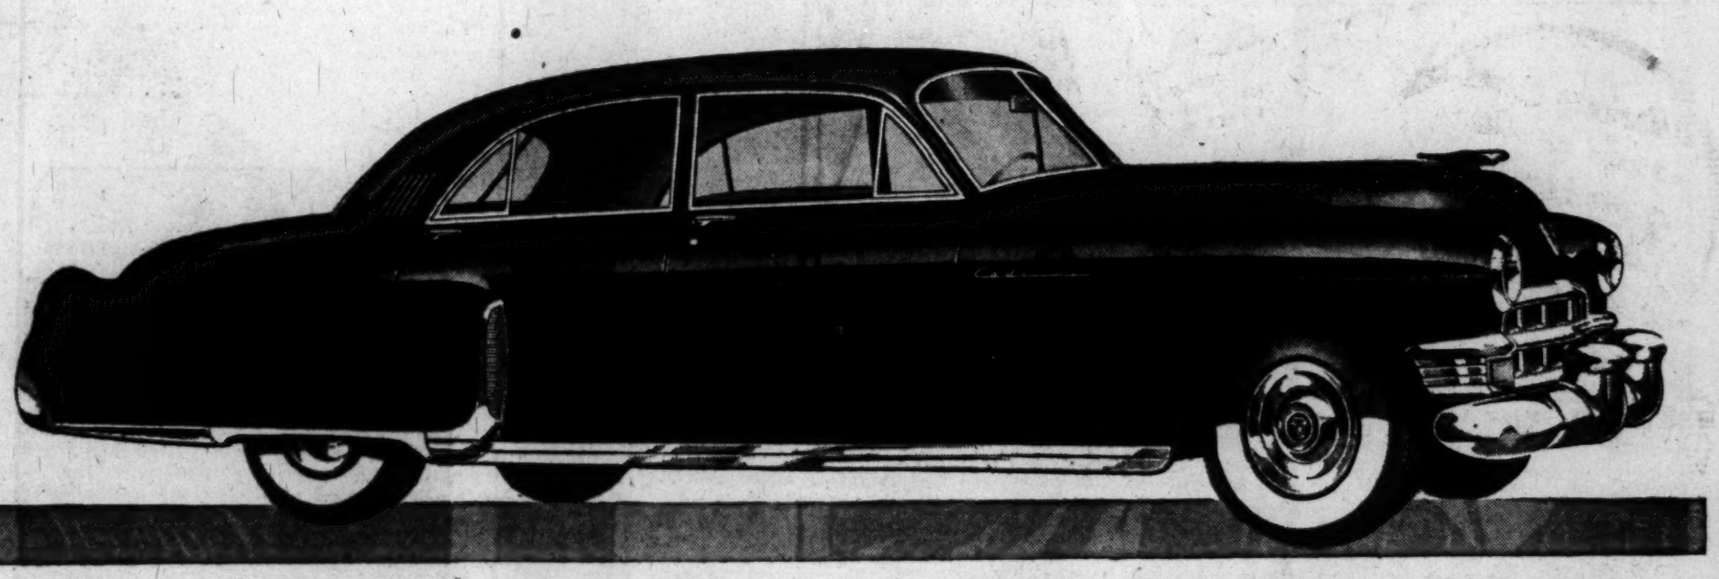
To the Man Who Is Worried About His Friends ...



Occasionally, we encounter a man who hesitates to buy a Cadillac for fear his friends might think him ostentatious.

For all such people, we have the most reassuring news: The experience of Cadillac owners would indicate that your fears are without foundation.

True, the world has long since recognized that a Cadillac car is a fine and distinguished possession—but most people understand that quality is not a luxury, and that distinction is the inevitable offspring of long-continued goodness.

The facts in support of Cadillac's practicality are so convincing that the mere recital of just a few should be sufficient reassurance for the most hesitant buyer.

Take, for instance, the matter of cost. There are eight other makes of cars which actually have models that are priced above the lowest-priced Cadillac. Yes—thousands of the motorists you see on the streets and highways paid more for their cars than the man who sits at the wheel of a Cadillac "61".

And, oh, the other facts in support of Cadillac value!

There is long life, for example. Four Cadillacs, of the 1942 Series, ran a total of 2,599,000 miles in a test recently concluded by a great tire manufacturer—almost 650,000 miles per car. All four were then sold into private service—and are still going strong!

Then there is economy. Innumerable tests show that the 1949 Cadillac actually approaches the lowest-priced popular cars in gasoline economy. Few standard cars will run farther on a gallon of gasoline!

And, finally, there are the dependability records—records which prove beyond dispute, that the car's freedom from the need of repairs is just as unusual as its performance and beauty!

Yes—if you are ready for a Cadillac, come in and place your order. You will never make a more sensible purchase—or one of which your friends and neighbors will more heartily approve.

Hoover Sees Perils In Inflation, Taxes

will be the promotion of the Hoover plan. There was warm applause as Mr. Hoover stepped forward to receive the plaque.

The two-day session of the committee opened yesterday with speakers from all walks of life urging need for greater economy and efficiency in Government.

Billed as a meeting for "A Cracker Barrel Discussion" by Americans on management problems of Government, the sessions opened at the Hotel Shoreham with the main ballroom stage, decorated as a country store, a cracker barrel in one corner.

Hoover Urges Eight Reforms

Former President Hoover urged swift adoption of eight reforms in Federal Government to save two billion dollars a year, stop higher taxes and inflation and preserve the American system against collapse and communism.

He said a reduction in Government costs is necessary to win the cold war, now being waged "at frightful cost," and the way to reduce cost is to reduce waste and "defer some Government ventures."

"By these reforms and self-denial, we can help disappoint Mr. Stalin," he said.

Mr. Hoover urged the Nation to concentrate on the most urgently needed reforms in Government.

He listed them as:

1. Reorganization of civil service. "At present Red Tape himself dwells in the civil service of 2,200,000 employes. The result is an accumulation of waste and deadwood and discouragement of good officials."

2. Reorganization of budgeting and accounting. "The ghost of Alexander Hamilton still wanders in our fiscal machinery. I doubt whether more than 15 men in the world can make head or tail of the 10 million words and sums in the present Federal Budget—certainly not all at one time."

3. Reorganization of the Postoffice. "We want the Postoffice set up as a modern business. We want it taken out of politics."

4. Unification of Federal hospital services. "As an indication of waste, there already existed in Federal hospitals, at the time of our investigation, beds for 225,000 patients and only 155,000 were occupied. Yet Congress had made appropriations for, or authorized, hospitals with 50,000 beds despite the fact that 70,000 are empty—at a cost of $1,300,000,000."

Interior, Agriculture Complete

5. Unification of water conservation services. "At present this function is scattered over many agencies. They employ over 5000 engineers and about 70,000 other people. They overlap. They have duplicate offices. A pork barrel floats in those rivers."

6. Unification of agricultural services. "In the Western States they (Agriculture and Interior Department) compete with each other cheek by jowl. Each maintains a staff in almost every county. Millions are being wasted "in them thar hills."

7. Unification of transportation services. "Aside from the agencies regulating transportation rates and services, there are about a dozen agencies scattered over a dozen different parts of the Government to deal with these matters. We must estimate their overlap and waste."

8. Relief for the President of the United States. "There are some 65 different agencies in the executive branch which report directly to the President. By our proposals we can ultimately reduce these 65 agencies by more than one-half."

Higher Per Capita Production

"Government spending" Mr. Hoover told several hundred citizens at a dinner meeting, "must be related to increased per capita production. Therein lies the key of increasing new enterprise, increasing real wages to our workers, increasing real income to our farmers and an increasing ability to give security to our youth and our aged."

Mr. Hoover cautioned against pinning rosy hopes on those economists who dismiss Federal expenditures as amounting to only about 20 percent of the national income, although economists agree that taxation beyond 25 percent of the national income will bring disaster.

'On this subject, if you add up the actual and prospective annual expenditures of the Federal Government and the local Governments, and if you truly compute the national income, you will find this warning red light no longer shines with an intensity of only 20 percent, but with considerably over 30 percent of the national income."

The figures he gave on national expenditures for State and local taxes, Mr. Hoover said, are not statistical assertions nor academic theories. Those forces reach into every cottage in the land. They carry with them the future of our youth and of our country.

Representative Clarence J. Brown (R., Ohio), a sponsor of the original move in Congress which set up the Hoover study of Government organization was another dinner speaker.

"Already nearly 20 percent of the Hoover Commission's recommendations have been put into effect, with an estimated direct annual savings of $1,225,000,000," Brown said.

At a luncheon meeting, Senator George D. Aiken (R., Vt), a member of the Congressional Committee which in 1947 set in motion the Government study, said Congress should follow through with legal watchdogs of the executive agencies.

Senator Aiken said there is a tendency in executive agencies to set up legal departments which make their own interpretations on how to apply the laws Congress has passed. Sometimes, he commented, they do not conform to Congressional intent.

Would Report to Congress

Referring to the General Accounting Office which keeps a check on the spending of appropriations, Aiken urged that Congress devise an agency directly responsible to itself to pass upon rules, regulations and interpretations which are formulated within the executive agencies."

Governor Adlai E. Stevenson of Illinois said Federal-State cooperation on many social and economic programs like education, health and housing is necessary but the huge Federal tax load complicates state budget problems."

Mrs. Oveta Culp Hobby, wartime commander of the Women's Army Corps and now executive vice president of the Houston Post, praised the Hoover Commission for disclosing "excesses and deficiencies" of the Federal Government.

Lewis G. Hines of the American Federation of Labor and Stanley Ruttenberg of the CIO discussed reorganization of Government from the labor union standpoint. Walter J. Kohler, jr., discussed Government from the standpoint of the business man.

Government Rests In Alger Hiss Trial

New York, Dec. 12 (NYHT).—The government rested its case against Alger Hiss in his second perjury trial today and Judge Henry W. Goddard denied defense motions for dismissal of the indictment and a directed verdict of acquittal.

Three former State Department officials opened the case for the defense. They testified that Hiss had an excellent reputation for "loyalty, integrity and veracity" while he was in the State Department.

One of these witnesses testified that William C. Bullitt, former Ambassador to France, once told him he had heard in Paris that Hiss was a "fellow traveler." The witness, Stanley K. Hornbeck, said that at that time he was advisor on political relations and Hiss was his assistant. He said the conversation might have taken place in 1939, but he thought it was later than that.

Hornbeck said he did not report Bullitt's statement to his superiors in the State Department nor to the Federal Bureau of Investigation. He indicated it did not affect his judgment of Hiss' reputation. He added no one else had ever said anything about Hiss being a fellow traveler, and he had never heard Hiss called a Communist nor accused of giving State Department documents to a Communist spy ring until Whittaker Chambers made these charges last year.

Hornbeck and another character witness, Harry C. Hawkins, former chief of the Trade Agreements Section of the State Department, also testified concerning some of the documents in the case which they had personally handled in the State Department. The third character witness was G. Howland Shaw, former Assistant Secretary of State in charge of Administrative Affairs, including security.

The final Government witness was Federick E. Webb, special agent of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, who identified a Leica camera owned by Felix Inslerman as the camera which had been used to make microfilm photographs of some of the Government documents which Hiss is accused of giving to Whittaker Chambers.

Chambers previously testified that Inslerman did the photographic work. Inslerman refused to testify.

Hiss was indicted for perjury when he denied ever giving any Government documents to Chambers.

Assistant United States Attorney Thomas F. Murphy rested the Government's case at 12:27 p. m. on the sixteenth court day of the trial. He had called 35 witnesses and the defense had called 7 witnesses out of turn. The trial was 2 days behind the timetable of the first trial, which ended in a hung jury July 8 at the end of 28 days.

The defense motions were argued by Robert Von Vehren, youngest of the team of four lawyers defending Hiss. He contended the indictment should be dismissed because the allegedly false statements were made by Hiss on the last day of the grand jury's term, and could not possibly have obstructed the grand jury's investigation.

Cites Statute of Limitations

He also contended that the perjury indictment was an attempt on the part of the Government "to do indirectly what it could not do directly," that is, prosecute Hiss for alleged acts of espionage committed in 1938. Von Mehren pointed out that the statute of limitations prevents prosecution for the alleged espionage, and should therefore prevent prosecution for perjury in connection with it.

Von Mehren argued the defendant is entitled to a judgment of acquittal on the grounds that Chambers, the principal Government witness, is "so thoroughly discredited that as a matter of law he cannot be corroborated."

As for the corroborative evidence produced by the Government, Von Mehren contended that even if true it did not prove that Hiss actually transmitted Government documents to Chambers, as alleged in the indictment, and that it could be explained away by many other theories consistent with the innocence of the defendant. He cited as an example the hypothesis that Chambers might have obtained access to the documents and to Hiss's typewriter and typed the incriminating papers himself.

Hiss is expected to take the witness stand later this week.

Friday Designated 'Waterless' Day For New Yorkers

New York, Dec. 12 (U.P.).—Eight million New Yorkers were asked today to make Friday a "waterless day" to help save the city's shrinking water supply.

Water Commissioner Stephen Carney said he would ask that water be used only for absolute necessities during the 24-hour period from midnight Thursday to midnight Friday.

"We hope the people won't double up on the amount of water they use the next day," he said. "The population can try a lot harder than it is to save water. We know they are not doing everything they could."

Light rains fell over the city during the weekend, but the commissioner said this had added "a potential yield" of only 700 million gallons, less than a day's supply. The city needs consistently heavy rainfall of seven inches a month—three inches above the average rainfall—to fill its reservoirs by next June, he said.

Jordan, Also

Atom Probe Will Recall Gen. Groves

By the United Press

House spy hunters yesterday announced they would recall retired Lieut. Gen. Leslie R. Groves, head of the wartime A-bomb project, for further questioning about the alleged "leak" of atomic materials to Russia in 1943-44.

Chairman John S. Wood (D., Ga.) said the House Committee on Un-American Activities also would recall George Racey Jordan, 53-year-old former Air Force major whose radio broadcast charges set off the new inquiry.

The reappearance of the two will permit them to be questioned by Republican committee members who complained they were not notified in time to attend the original hearings. They accused their Democratic colleagues of a "political whitewash" in the case.

Wood announced through committee counsel Frank S. Tavenner, jr., that Groves and Jordan would be recalled when the investigators reopen their hearings next Monday. Former Vice President Henry A. Wallace, who has been linked with the alleged shipments, will be heard later.

Jordan also had named Harry Hopkins, President Roosevelt's late confidant, in connection with the shipments. Groves denied flatly, however, that Wallace, Hopkins or anyone else high in the Roosevelt Administration had brought pressure on him to help the Russians.

But after concluding his testimony, he told reporters he would have given a clearer picture of wartime atomic shipments to Russia if he had been asked "different questions." He also revealed that he had "withheld" A-bomb progress reports from Wallace.

Jordan had charged that some 2500 pounds of uranium and literally tons of secret papers went through the Great Falls, Mont., air base to Russia in 1943-44 when he was a liaison officer at the field.

The State Department has confirmed that export licenses were issued to the Soviets for 1420 pounds of uranium compounds, 25 pounds of uranium metal and 2 pounds of "heavy water" in 1943. Jordan claims the uranium he mentioned went through Great Falls in 1944—nearly a year later.

Wallace's name was brought into the inquiry by radio commentator Fulton Lewis, jr., who charged that the former top New Dealer "overrode" Groves and cleared uranium for Russia. Groves denied that.

The three GOP committee members who accused their Democratic colleague of calling "quickie hearings" are Representatives Richard M. Nixon (Calif.); Harold H. Velde (Ill.), and Francis I. Case (S. Dak.).

Coplon-Gubitchev Case May Be Thrown Out

"I certainly will bar the use of (wiretap) transcripts in the trial and suppress any evidence that flows from them," added the judge.

The 28-year-old former Government girl and the 34-year-old Soviet engineer are scheduled to go on trial December 27 on charges of conspiring to transmit United States Government secrets to Russia.

The prosecution has admitted tapping the telephone wires of both defendants but said it is not basing its case on information thus obtained.

Judge Ryan said the United States Attorney General had no power to order an FBI wiretap of the defendants' telephones.

He also said past Supreme Court decisions might force him to dismiss the case if it rests solely on information obtained through tapped telephone wires.

Earlier Judge Ryan ruled that Gubitchev must stand trial with Miss Coplon and denied the engineer's motion for a separate trial.

Farm Bureau Blasts Brannan and Aides

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

Chicago, Dec. 12.—The American Farm Bureau Federation met here today in warfare not only against the Brannan farm plan, but also against Agriculture Secretary Charles F. Brannan and several Agriculture Department heads.

One speaker after another and one mimeograph after another rolled out diatribes against Brannan and all his works.

In Washington, however, Secretary Brannan, uninvited to the meeting, sent the federation a message today asking "free discussion" of his proposed new farm program.

"I appeal to you," Brannan said, "to put aside your personal differences which might deprive the farmers of this country of the information necessary for wise decisions. Progress in a democracy depends on full and free discussion."

Would Inform Members

The Secretary asked that federation members be informed on several points.

1. That the postwar decline in farm prices threatens the stability of the economy.

2. That sliding-scale supports would "merely permit farm prices to fall faster in relation to nonfarm prices."

3. That history shows that sliding-scale prices do not adjust production, but often tend to lead farmers to increase production in a "very natural race to keep up their total income."

4. That farmers "themselves must help find a way of supporting perishable commodities that does not work to the disadvantage of other people."

Allen B. Kline, federation president and a Vinton, Iowa, hog producer, and other federation officials told newsmen they see no reason for Brannan to feel "hurt." They said that they're against the Brannan plan and see no point in reviewing it. Kline called Brannan's plan one for "stabilized mediocrity" based on "a philosophy that we can pass a law to get security."

He told a convention group conference that the Brannan plan is for "high prices for farmers, low prices for consumers, but it won't help anybody very much."

Spurred by a successful membership drive, and a truce in the internal warfare that has torn the organization for two years, the federation seemed willing to take on all comers.

'Enemies' Listed

At an organization meeting, Roger Fleming, legislative director, listed the "enemies" of the Farm Bureau. They are the people, he said, who wish the farmers to be represented by men "who won't speak loud, or say what they want." He listed them in the order of their importance:

1. A "Production and Marketing Administrator" who wants PMA committees to do the talking for farmers. Although he mentioned no names, he plainly referred to PMA Administrator Ralph S. Trigg.

2. Labor unions, which, he said, are "largely consumers." He said a farm group that affiliated with labor would soon have "the same relationship to labor unions that Charlie McCarthy has to Edgar Bergen."

3. "The businessman on Main Street," who "got to a position of political influence by pretending to speak for the farmer." The only "Main Streeters" he listed, however, were "the banker and newspaperman." When a farm group takes things into its hands, Main Street has "to move to a side street," he asserted.

Although a two-year attempt to defeat Kline for reelection as president has been compromised, the sessions here are not all sweet and cozy.

One of the most interesting is a disagrement between Kline and the man he succeeded, former president Edward A. O'Neal, of Florence, Ala.

Kline wants to move the sprawling headquarters of the federation from Chicago to Washington. O'Neal is opposed. But Kline is riding the wave right now, and apparently will get his way.

O'Neal declares the move carries a lot of danger. First, he says, all the commodity groups that make up AFBF—cotton, tobacco, corn, wheat, etc., will be close to Congress to lobby for their own interests, instead of all lobbying by the legislative committee in Washington.

He also states that "several presidents" of the United States Chamber of Commerce have told him that that group made a mistake when it moved to Washington and built a big building opposite the White House.

Low Incomes Are Declared Peril to National Security

The "dangerous relationship" between low incomes and poor health and poor educational opportunities could "undermine a nation's security," a high Federal official told a congressional inquiry yesterday.

John L. Thurston, acting Federal Security Administrator, argued that the relationship was a vicious circle and should be attacked by increased Federal health, security and aid-to-education programs.

"Low income breeds ill health," he said, and "low income . . . results in poor educational opportunities. On the other hand, ill health and limited education have been shown over and over again to be among the prime causes of low earnings."

Thurston was the first witness before a subcommittee of the Congressional Committee on the Economic Report. The subgroup is studying the problem of low-income families.

Thurston indorsed the Administration's compulsory health insurance program as a device that would "substantially cut down the loss of earning capacity because of ill health and disability."

He also asked for expanded Federal programs to aid education, and increased social security benefits.

Thurston said that more than five million needy Americans are now receiving public assistance at a cost of nearly two billion dollars a year.

The Federal Government he declared provides about half of the two-billion-dollar outlay, while the other half comes from State and local community funds.

The Federal official said that in April this year there were 5,500,000 American families headed by a nonwage earner and almost three million other individuals who are not wage earners.

"The time is long past for questioning the principle of public responsibility to provide a minimum table income for this group," he said. "Fortunately, we already have a tested method of meeting this need through social insurance, supplemented by public assistance."

One of the subcommittee members, Representative Robert F. Rich (R., Pa.), indorsed the idea of broadened social security payments and urged universal coverage of all workers under the 75-cents-an-hour minimum wage standard. But he opposed the "socialized medicine" plan.

He went on to suggest that everyone in the Federal Government, "starting at the White House and going right on down," should be given a mental examination.

"I think we have a lot of people in the Government who don't think of anything but spending," he declared. He said each Federal worker and each member of Congress should be given an examination to make certain he was of sound mind.

"I'm willing to stand it and if I don't measure up, I should be put aside," he said.

Rich labeled as "appaling" and almost incredible an estimate of Thurston that 3 million of the 30 million children now in school suffer from serious emotional and behavior problems.

Some authorities believe, Thurston reported, that three out of the average classroom of 30 children are destined at some point in their lives to take treatment in a mental hospital.

Limit on Cotton Acre Cuts Proposed by House Members

By The Associated Press

A congressional committee last night proposed to limit cotton acreage cuts to individual farmers, while earlier a group of Texas growers tossed the problem into District Court.

A House Cotton Subcommittee, headed by Representative Pace (D., Ga.), took note of protests from the cotton belt that acreage allotments for 1950 are too drastic and pose a threat to some farmers.

Meanwhile, a United States district judge here scheduled for next Monday a hearing on a motion through which 10 Texas farmers want an immediate order to restrain Agriculture Department officials from enforcing a proposed quota program.

Counsel for cotton producers in 11 Texas Gulf coastal bend counties filed the action.

After a day-long session with Agriculture Department officials, the House committee came up with these recommendations for a solution to the problem.

1. That the Secretary of Agriculture request farmers who will not plant all or any of their allotment to release the same to their local county production and marketing administration committees and that the Secretary authorize such committees to reallocate such acreage within the county.

2. That Congress early next year amend the 1949 Acreage Allotment Act to provide that no 1950 crop allotment shall be less than the larger of 70 percent of the average acreage actually planted to cotton on the farm in 1946, 1947 and 1948, or 50 percent of the highest acreage planted to cotton or regarded as planted to cotton in any one of the three years.

In Chicago, the directors of the American Farm Bureau Federation urged cotton growers to vote to retain marketing quotas for the 1950 crop. The referendum is scheduled for next Thursday.

The committee acted as some members expressed fear that unless dissatisfied cotton growers are placated the producers might reject cotton marketing quotas in next Thursdays' referendum.

If more than a third of the farmers voting Thursday turn down the quotas, then the Government automatically will drop its price support program from 90 percent of parity to 50 percent.

Representative Cooley (D., N. C.) said this probably would mean a $50 drop in the price of a bale of cotton, a loss of 400 million dollars to the Government on cotton it owns, losses of many millions to growers and dealers, and a blow to the country's economy.

The Texas farmers who went to court complained of unfair distribution of the quota among the counties in their State, not of the Texas quota, which is set at 7,632,029 acres.

Waving The Shirt

Just as Admiral Denfeld is trying to decide whether to remain on active Navy duty, along comes Representative W. Sterling Cole to wave the bloody shirt. Mr. Cole, a member of the House Armed Services Committee, sent telegrams to 308 Navy admirals and Marine Corps generals asking their views on Admiral Denfeld's testimony. It is hardly surprising that of 170 replies received, some 117 definitely agreed with Denfeld. No one, of course, has disputed that Admiral Denfeld voiced the beliefs of a good many officers at the time of his ouster as chief of naval operations. More significant, however, is the commendable silence of the 138 who did not reply.

The point is simply that the affair ought to be considered closed. Admiral Denfeld spoke his mind. He was removed from his job, not as a matter of punishment, but because his testimony showed him to be in opposition both to the basic unification law and to the civilian authorities administering that law. The issue was whether the admirals alone would determine Navy policy, or whether that policy would be worked out as a part of the broader national defense. On this point the President had no alternative but to support his civilian Secretary.

In reopening the feud Representative Cole has done a disservice both to Admiral Denfeld and to the Navy. The accent now ought to be on unity, not division. We hope that Admiral Denfeld, fine officer that he is, will accept the decision loyally and exert his influence within the Navy to bind up the wounds. His successor, Admiral Sherman, has done a good job of rallying the sea arm and giving it a sense of mission as a working partner in unification. The new chief ought to have assurance that the dead cats, once buried, would stay that way.

Trying The Witnesses

How far should a defense counsel be permitted to go in an effort to discredit a witness whose testimony might be damaging to the defendant? It seems to us that a good many of them go a good deal further than is compatible with legal ethics or with the notion of a fair trial by an impartial hearing of the relevant evidence.

An instance occurred the other day in San Francisco at the trial of Harry Bridges, who is accused of perjury, because, when applying for American citizenship, he swore that he was not and had never been a member of the Communist Party. One of the Government witnesses, John H. Schomaker, an apostate Communist, testified that he had been the means of inducting Mr. Bridges into the party. In the cross-examination the chief defense counsel, Vincent Hallinan, questioned the witness concerning testimony he had given in another trial ten years ago before the California Superior Court. Holding up what the bench, the witness, the spectators and the jury understood to be a transcript of a court record, the attorney asked the witness if he remembered having been questioned on that occasion about possible Communist affiliations. Mr. Hallinan pretended to read from the document in his hand as follows:

> Q. Are you a member of the Communist Party?
> A. Who, me? No.

The attorney then demanded of the witness if he remembered having made such a statement. The implication, of course, was that in one trial or the other, the witness had given perjured testimony. Mr. Shomaker replied: "That is possible, but I don't remember it."

The prosecution, evidently scenting something amiss, demanded that the transcript be incorporated into the record of the Bridges trial. Mr. Hallinan refused. Then it developed that neither the question nor answer cited by Mr. Hallinan had appeared in the transcript. In other words, the attorney had made them up. His justification was:

> I wanted to prove this man's unreliability. I got him to admit that he might very well have testified falsely under oath. I set out to trick him and I did.

More recently, at the same trial, James McInnis, also of defense counsel, told the court that he would prove by naturalization records that a Government witness, Henry Schrimpf, a former Communist and walking official of Mr. Bridges' union, "is a liar." The judge, after protest by the prosecution, instructed the jury to disregard the statement. When the naturalization records were produced it was shown that Mr. Schrimpf had answered "No" to a question whether he had for ten years prior to the application been a member of an "organization teaching disbelief in or opposition to organized government." There was nothing, however, to show that Mr. Schrimpf had ever been asked a direct question about membership in the Communist Party.

Now the question here is whether a trial in a criminal case is to be conceived as a kind of game in which the sole object of either side is to win the verdict by whatever means seem expedient. Under this concept the judge becomes merely a referee who is to blow a whistle and penalize the offending side only when a foul is called to his attention. It is the concern of the whole country that the standards of procedure and of justice are being thus debased.

War On Bureaucracy

Former President Hoover's address here last night is the prelude to what is likely to be a formidable struggle in the 1950 session of Congress. Speaking for the Reorganization Commissions which have now been set up in 20 States and 10 municipalities, Mr. Hoover made a strong plea for economy and efficiency in government. His specific objective is to bring about the most urgent reforms outlined in the recent report of the official Reorganization Commission, of which he was chairman, but that aim is closely related to the larger task of maintaining our strength and solvency in an age of grave challenge from totalitarian systems.

Those unacquainted with the ways of politics may be inclined to assume that the odds overwhelmingly favor enactment of the sensible reform that the Hoover Commission proposed. The program has the support of President Truman, of both the Democratic and Republican leaders in Congress, and of hundreds of civic organizations. As Mr. Hoover noted, it is an entirely nonpartisan fight. But the proposed reforms have the bitter opposition of an entrenched bureaucracy and of special interests that may be expected to fight to the last ditch to retain their present prerogatives.

Typical of the wastefulness found in the existing Federal establishment are the many agencies devoted to conservation of water resources. These agencies employ more than 5000 engineers and about 70,000 other employes. "They overlap," Mr. Hoover said; "they have duplicate offices; they compete in procurement of both supplies and skills and jobs to do. A pork-barrel floats in those rivers." In the Western States the Departments of Agriculture and Interior compete with each other in the management of expansive areas of land, maintaining separate staffs in almost every county. Similarly some agencies are frantically building hospitals while other agencies serving the same government have many thousands of empty beds.

No doubt the rank and file of citizens will agree that these wasteful policies cannot be tolerated at a time when another five-billion-dollar Federal deficit looms up and national and local governments are absorbing more than 30 per cent of the national income. But more than talk will be necessary to bring about the suggested reforms. The fact is that many of the agencies that ought to be consolidated or abolished have their defenders in Congress and a vast claque of citizens benefiting from their activities who may be expected to rush to their defense regardless of the cost to taxpayers. Some of the groups fattening on Federal subsidies have become strong enough to make or break members of Congress and even executive officials. Their grip upon Congress will have to be broken if the reforms outlined by Mr. Hoover are to succeed. And this can be accomplished only if organized citizen groups demanding efficiency and solvency can apply greater pressure than power-grasping bureaus and the enormous groups of beneficiaries whom they serve.

South Africa's Censors

South Africa has had an extremely bad press of late throughout the world. According to her Minister of Defense and Posts and Telegraphs, F. C. Erasmus, this is due entirely to slanderous misrepresentations sent by reporters to newspapers overseas, and he intends to have no more of it. He said in a speech the other day to a party rally in the Transvaal that these reporters "must not expect of me that all their reports will reach their destination. It is time the government put its foot down and the government is doing so."

There is, of course, nothing novel about this form of press relations. It has been practiced for a good many years by the Soviet Union and is now the vogue in all the countries behind the iron curtain. Correspondents are not permitted to send out unfavorable dispatches. It cannot be said, however, that the policy has worked out very satisfactorily from the point of view of the countries pursuing it, let alone from the free world's point of view. A very strong impression prevails that the territory east of the Oder is not entirely a land of milk and honey or of harmony and contentment. Censorship inevitably engenders suspicion. Experience has shown that it is usually applied by governments that have something shameful to conceal.

South Africa has a difficult racial relations problem. Her handling of this problem has colored her relations with the former German colony of southwest Africa which she governed under a League of Nations mandate but is now unwilling to put under a United Nations trusteeship agreement. A week ago, the trusteeship committee of the U. N. General Assembly heard the Rev. Michael Scott, Anglican cleric representing native groups in South Africa, make a moving plea for U. N. action to curb South Africa's rigid segregation policy in the former mandated area. South Africa's government could impose no censorship on this kind of revelation.

A New York Times correspondent, G. H. Archambault, has reported that foreign embassies and legations in Pretoria have been asked to furnish the government with details of press laws in their countries—an indication that dispatches are not now censored. From this, it is deduced, however, that a new and more drastic press law is contemplated in South Africa. We think that an iron curtain of this character would succeed only in aggravating the loss of "face" which former Prime Minister Jan Christian Smuts said recently his country had suffered in the eyes of the world.

Maryland Tax Dilemma

In 1944 Maryland introduced a system of rotating or continuing reassessment of real estate. Under the plan each county has been divided into five districts, and every year the realty in one of these districts is reassessed. If real estate values were comparatively stable, this arrangement would be far superior to the former system of county-wide reassessment at five-year intervals, since the assessor can do a better job when the area covered in any given year is limited. However, real estate values are much higher today than in 1941-42, the base period used during the first five years under the rotating plan to determine the fair market value of realty for reassessment purposes. In order to allow for increases in value brought about by inflation, population growth and general prosperity, the base period for this year's reassessments was shifted to 1943-44. As a result, real estate owners in the districts in line for reassessment have larger tax bills than owners of equally valuable property in other districts.

Protesting this inequitable arrangement, the commissioners of Calvert County refused to accept the new valuations, and their action has been upheld by a county Circuit Court in a decision by Judge Gray denying the right of the State Tax Commission to compel compliance with its directives. The plan, as administered, the judge said, is "an unlawful discrimination" and such a discrimination "through administrative action is just as repugnant to constitutional guarantees as would be an invalid act of the Legislature."

Although Judge Gray's decision does not invalidate the system of rotation as such, it would, if sustained make the present system unworkable, since it would be impossible to discard obsolete assessment bases in order of rotation. Possibly some plan, such as that of Washington County, setting up reassessment divisions by types, instead of basing them on location, might prove acceptable, although any change in the assessment basis, whether up or down, that applies to one group of real estate owners, leaving others untouched for the time being is bound to result in a certain amount of inequity. The notorious instability of real estate values, in fact, makes it extremely difficult, probably impossible, to devise any plan for continuous assessment that would satisfy the requirements of a fair tax system. In spite of the imperfections of the method of periodical reassessments, it is preferable to a system that inevitably results in discrimination against some taxpayers and favors others.

Clifford K. Berryman

Clifford Berryman's death brings a sense of personal loss to a great many Washingtonians who never knew him personally. They will miss not only his cartoons but the man himself. For his personality permeated and was transmitted through his work in an extraordinary way. Anyone familiar with the cartoons was familiar with the cartoonist—knew him to be a man ripened by experience, gentle and warm and endowed with the kind of humor that illuminates and sets in perspective whatever it depicts. These are attributes that age could not wither. And so we see no reason now to modify an appreciation of his drawing submitted on this page five years ago when he was awarded a Pulitzer Prize.

> Mr. Berryman has become as much a Washington institution as, say, the Marine Band or the Easter Monday egg rollings. It seems to us that, good as they were to begin with, his cartoons have been quietly improving all these years. The taste for them is, to be sure, an acquired taste, but at least three generations of Washingtonians have acquired it as naturally as they acquire the language. A Berryman cartoon is more likely to provoke a smile or a chuckle than an outright laugh, but this, according to the wise men, is the higher form of humor. Thus his method is greatly in contrast to the prevailing fashion, which tends toward sharp and acid satire. The Berryman satire is oblique rather than direct and softened by an instinctive kindliness. If he "nothing extenuates," neither does he "set down aught in malice."

We took note on that occasion of the fact that Mr. Berryman's first and early newspaper illustrations appeared in The Washington Post and expressed a belief, therefore, that his colleagues of the Evening Star would not take it amiss if we claimed for ourselves "a slight share of their pride" in the honor bestowed on him. We claim now, out of affection and respect, a share in their bereavement.

AS YOUNG AS SPRING

Today I am as young as spring,
With the rain on my face and my thoughts on The wing.
The wind on the hills are calling to me
And my heart is as light as the air is free.

Deep in the pine scented glade,
Violets rest in a royal shade,
Where the first green leaves upon the trees
Stir with the freshened breeze.

I awake to hear a robin sing
And feel again the surge of spring.

Hindsight On Russia

By Marquis Childs

Ghosts On Parade

LEADING from strength is the only sound tactic, whether in cards or in the cold war that is dividing the world. Presumably that is what we are doing in the costly programs for military and economic aid in Europe and in Asia.

But here at home we seem determined to show ourselves as weak and divided as possible. Uncle Sam leads with a glass chin. Abroad, it creates a strange impression to see the Colossus of North America cowering before his own shadow.

The newest example is the furor over whether Harry Hopkins and Henry Wallace did or did not try to expedite the shipment of atomic materials to the Soviet Union during the war. The so-called testimony presented thus far is thin to the point of being absurd, and Lieut. Gen. Leslie R. Groves did not substantiate any of the "charges" made by a former Air Force shipping expediter.

As the shrill cries of angry Republican members of the House Un-American Committee immediately made obvious, there is a lot of party politics in this newest "exposure." The motive is to smear the past and the men around Franklin Roosevelt.

These sheeted ghosts will be dragged before the public again—again and again and again, as FDR used to like to say. Therefore it seems to me important to put the whole business in proper perspective.

DURING the war the Soviet Union was the ally of the United States and Great Britain. A lot of people seem to have forgotten that. Russian soldiers killed and wounded millions of the enemy and, in turn, perhaps as many as 10 million Russians were casualties.

Naturally, everything was done to send all possible material—short of a few ultimate secrets mostly related to the atomic bomb—to our ally. Terrible sacrifices were made to get that material to Russia. Often this Government was far behind on promised shipments and the besieged Russians cried out in rage and desperation.

With the end of the war a new phase began. In spite of warning signs, our Government made every effort to work with Russia, the wartime ally, to build a peaceful world. This was leading from strength and confidence—the confidence of a victory won out of the power of American arms and American productivity.

With hindsight we may see that some foolish and totally unnecessary things were done in this postwar phase. Take an instance that has never been aired before any committee.

In early 1946 Moscow asked permission to send a group of Soviet engineers to the United States. They were to study the water systems of leading American cities so, presumably, they could go back to Russia and direct the construction of similar systems.

J. Edgar Hoover, head of the FBI, was opposed to granting permission for the visit. He was overruled by the Department of State.

THE SOVIET engineers came to America. They got measured drawings of blueprints of major water systems, including those of New York and Los Angeles, where huge populations are dependent for life on a stream of water piped over a long distance.

How much this information would help Russia in the event of war is not clear. The same knowledge might have come, although less easily, through Russian espionage. Such espionage is one of the grim facts of the present day world; just as American espionage is a fact—and if it is not a fact, then the 50 million dollars or more which goes in secret to the Central Intelligence Agency is being wasted.

The third phase of Russian-United States relations began with the realization that the Soviet Union was bent on nothing less than world domination. The Communist Parties in individual countries were instruments for aggression and control, wholly subservient to Moscow policy. The third phase saw the start of the cold war.

America has a strong moral position in the cold war, and the chief reason is because this country demonstrated to the world that it went the whole way in trying to work peacefully and honestly with Soviet Russia. That has been a fact of paramount importance too often overlooked.

The destroyers and the haters who rake over the past in the suddenly acquired wisdom of hindsight may make the headlines they are after. But those headlines do a deep wrong to America's position. And if they do any good, it is certainly not evident.

Letters To The Editor

Communications must be addressed to the editor and must carry the complete name and street address of the writer, though pen names will be permitted at the editor's discretion. Letters of less than 200 words will be given preference, and all letters are subject to condensation. No communication can be returned.

"Plot To Win The War"

The general soundness and rationality of your editorial policy were demonstrated again in "Plot to Win the War" of December 8.

This reader had considered, for several days, the advisability of a letter to the editor recalling the fact that, at the time of the events "disclosed" by Messrs. Jordan and Lewis, it was considered patriotic in the extreme to do anything feasible to aid our valiant ally who had so gallantly repelled the enemy in his homeland; but had decided that such a letter probably would brand him in the eyes of some readers and some officials—as a dangerous Communist sympathizer.

However, since your fearless assertions (hope you don't get investigated for reminding people of such things), yours truly hopes you'll allot him a small corner in which to agree with the entire article and the thoughts it provokes.

There is no better antidote for the dismal content of the news than one of those delightful exercises in light satire that occasionally adorn your editorial page. "Plot to Win the War" was like a bright ray of sunshine suddenly breaking through a wall of dark and stormy clouds.

I knew the Fulton Lewis sensation reminded me of something in my English history. It came back to me—"The Popish Plot," and he the reincarnation of Titus Oates.

There were a little more credulous in those days, and 30 or 40 people were executed for something they never dreamed of doing. I doubt if any harm will be done by this patriotic effort, and just think how many people it has filled with joy! Even though they didn't believe it, either.

Re Herblock's December 9 cartoon on "Phony Atom Story No. 54," somebody's slip is showing and it seems to be cut on the bias.

I don't know that you're wrong, but I think it's too early to say who is right or wrong in this controversy. In brief, I didn't know that honest newspaper policy allowed for reporting a verdict before it is in.

Sex Offenders

A correspondent of December 7, writing on sex offenders, makes the worthwhile suggestion that much more money be spent for mental hygiene and psychiatric centers, to get at the cause of sex crimes. It is ridiculous that in a city the size of Washington there are only three or four mental hygiene clinics, so under-staffed and overworked that there are long waiting lists, and the average time spent with a patient is an hour a week, if that much.

It is certainly true, as she points out, that punishment is ineffective. Society has always erroneously assumed that laws can cure anything; the stricter the law, the more certain the cure. Two hundred years ago theft was punished by death on the gallows, yet people's pockets were picked during such executions. Sexual offenders are mentally sick people and should be treated.

The visitor to the public library in search of information on the sexual psychopath will be disappointed. Freud and Jung, recommended by your correspondent, do not deal with sexual offenders as such, but only provide general statements, clews and hints which might serve as guides to those making specialized studies. But here in Washington, in St. Elizabeths Hospital, we have some of the country's great experts, who have accumulated stores of knowledge through years of study of the sexual offender. But these studies are not available, and presumably never will be, until some public-spirited citizen will provide the money necessary to prepare the material for publication.

EDNA F. CHRISTENSEN.
Lanham, Md.

It seems in recent years the sex criminal has been taken under the protective wings of misguided citizens, who excuse his actions with driblets of nonsense gleaned from amateur research into the wide field of modern psychiatry. Because some brutal fiend sucked his thumb in childhood or was afraid of the dark does not excuse nor explain any reason he may have had for ravishing a child.

Must we put these "poor unfortunate, ill people" in nice white hospitals, hold their hands and ask, "Why did you do that naughty, naughty thing?" I as a mother say a vehement "no." Pampering isn't the answer; castration is!

PEGGIE C. MASHETER.

"Drop In The Bucket"

One of the most expensive and dangerous attitudes in our Government today is the complacency about the "drop in the bucket." Every day we read about the need for funds for this charity, for the "starving" people in that country, for the rivers and harbors bill, for a rider on some appropriations bill, for a committee to investigate some artificial trumped-up problem, for a necessary trip for 50 or so Congressmen, and so on and on. An occasional Congressman opposes such proposals because a few know the value of a dollar, but for the most part they are usually approved because our lawmakers feel that this is just a "drop in the bucket."

There is a simple fact that is most apparent—there are a given number of drops in a bucket, and one can empty a bucket if he removes enough drops.

Bell-Pushers

The December 7 letter of J. H. Colquit on James Metcalfe's reference to "bell-pushers" elicits from me an immediate comment. The "Portraits" composed by James J. Metcalfe reveal him as a poet with deep regard for sentiment. Anyone who has lost some dear one can derive real comfort and consolation in his intimate portraits.

High-pressure sales talk has long been the bane of our economy, as witness the long list of newspaper ads for salesmen wanted. Dollar grabbers are usually lacking in the finer qualities of human emotion.

Wandering Continents

When Dr. Vannevar Bush (story published December 10) expressed the opinion that land masses of the earth may be moving, he expressed an idea that is not at all new. Scientists for ages have contended that land masses have been moving and shifting through the aeons of time.

That these land masses do not move in unison is well established. The best yardstick on both points is found in the Straits of Gibraltar. About 400 B. C. the straits of Gibraltar were 4 miles wide, and in approximately 2400 years have widened to 12 miles. Records made from time to time show that the movement by which the Straits have widened has been rather uniform at the rate of one mile in 300 years.

While it must remain an unproved theory, scientists have also suggested that the crust of the earth to a depth of something like 30 miles has nomadic tendencies, and that all surface changes such as uprising of mountains and sinking of continents take place in this "crust." When contour maps are studied it is quite apparent that the east coast of South America, as well as North America, has corresponding features in the west coast of Africa and Europe, indicating that the land areas of North and South America have been detached from the land areas of Europe and Africa. It is also rather apparent that at one time the land areas of the world as we know them were comprised in one large continent.

Such changes and shifting of land areas to a depth of 30 miles would have little or no effect on the shape of the earth as a whole or interfere with its equilibrium. While the physical outline of North and South America, Europe and Africa clearly indicates a cleavage from a common mass, yet this break must have occurred some hundreds of millions of years ago. Long after the original separation a continent arose in the gap (the lost continent of Atlantis) and in the course of time this continent sank beneath the waves. The great Atlantic plateau indicates the proof of this.

In Plato's Timmaeus and Critias, the story of the sinking of Atlantis is recounted. The Plato account which is based on information received from the priests of Sais in Egypt, by Solon, alleges the sinking of Atlantis took place about 9500 years previously. Legends and records in other parts of the world place great terrestrial disturbances at the time mentioned as the disappearance of Atlantis.

The last of the great ice ages evidently followed a great terrestial disturbance about 200,000 years ago, and the final disappearance of the ice sheet occurred about 40,000 years ago. Subsequent to the recession of the ice sheet, the mountains of North and South America rose some 3000 to 4000 feet, and with them large land areas emerged from the waters.

The coast contours indicate that the breaking away of North and South America from the great land mass took place at a very remote age, and that the continent of Atlantis emerged from the depths of the ocean afterward. In the Pacific Ocean it is clear that there was a large continent which was either connected to North and South America or was separated by a narrow strait of water, and this also sank beneath the ocean, probably during the same cataclsym which caused the sinking of Atlantis.

There has been a suggestion by some that the sinking of Atlantis as described by Plato was a "fish story" the priests of Sais put over on Solon, but the fact is some 500 years after Solon's visit to Sais the same data and description were given another Greek.

Baha'i Faith

The December 4 article entitled "Bahais Serene Amid Israel Conflicts" was evidently written by someone not acquainted with the Baha'i teachings. The writer Kenneth Bilby made an erroneous and harmful statement when he wrote: "The Bahais recognize Christ, Mohammed and other secular leaders as legitimate but not as divine offspring."

The Baha'i writings are filled with explanations as to the divinity of the founders of all the great religions of the world. In fact, we believe they are all One, including Abraham, Moses, Zoroaster, Buddha, Jesus Christ, Mohammed. We believe that Baha'u'llah is the return of Christ in the glory of the Father, as foretold in the Holy Scriptures.

4 Killed as DC-3 Crashes Near Airport

crash since one near Leesburg, Va., on June 13, 1947. They said it was the fourth crash in 23 years of operation.

Rescuers encountered extreme difficulty in getting survivors out. Ruptured gasoline tanks spread a pall of vapors over the area which precluded use of torches, or even axes or power tools for fear of a spark which would ignite the wreckage.

One Boat Stands By

At midnight, Col. Sydney Grubbs, Bolling Base commander, said that though one crash boat will remain near the wreckage, "not much more can be done" until the fog lifts and visibility resumes at daylight.

The District Chapter of the American Red Cross rushed supplies of blood to Bolling Base Hospital and stood by to furnish more, if needed. It also dispatched canteen trucks to suply rescue workers at the Bolling Field docks.

Confirmation of the probable death of the pilot and copilot came from Capt. V. T. Sconsler, a rescuer.

"I managed to get part of my head and my arm through the wreckage of the cockpit. I touched either the pilot or copilot. Believe me, they couldn't have been alive."

In addition to the disasterous Eastern crash on November 1, there have been several "near misses" recently involving passenger planes in the crowded airlanes around National Airport.

In one case an Eastern Air Lines Constellation pilot told the CAA he "narrowly averted" a collision with an Air Force plane practicing blind landings at Bolling.

Practice Flights Banned

The report led to Temporary suspension of such flights at Bolling.

The CAA barred all "combat type" planes from National airport, including former warplanes converted for private use.

CAA officials said flight conditions at the time of last night's accident were "well within the permissible minimums." They said the ceiling at the time was 400 feet and visibility three-fourths of a mile, despite rain and fog.

The Civil Aeronautics Administration and Civil Aeronautics Board both dispatched officials to the scene immediately.

The CAB is charged with investigating all plane crashes to determine their probable cause.

CAA officials said other planes using the National Airport instrument landing system made safe landings both before and after the crash, indicating the airport's safety system was working "perfectly."

Asked if that might indicate Davis' instruments may have failed, they said any speculation at this time "is premature." They said only a full investigation can establish the actual cause of the accident.

of the passengers appeared to be men.

"The tail of the plane was intact, but was badly crumbled. We had six men on each rescue boat.

Sergt. Merrill Frass was put out in a rowboat and inched his way to the ship.

Survivors on Wing

"I saw fellows standing on the left wing," he said. "There were two sailors and a civilian. All I could do was to comfort them at first. I gave one my jacket and another my shoes.

"I told them to lay down to keep from getting shock. They were yelling they were cold, and 'help' and 'get me out,'

"I threw a rope to one of them and told him to fasten it around his waist. He did. Then I called to the crash boat about 100 yards away and it came in.

"The deck was about five feet up. We put blankets around these fellows and angled stretchers down from the deck and lifted them up.

"Inside the ship, we got one man out whose left leg fas snapped at the ankle. Only skin was holding it.

"I didn't have on much clothing then so I ripped off my underwear. With them and my handkerchief, I made a tourniquet and put it on his leg. He held it himself. He was next to the pilots' section."

Corpl. Ralph Everton, 25, said that "we got four or five off the wing, and one from back in the tail. The side of the tail section was ripped open about 20 feet. The man in the tail section had his leg lying in water. We took a stretcher and forced it under him.

"We found a Marine in uniform with his left leg broken. He kept saying, 'It hurts bad'."

Corpl. Rudolph Butts, 20, said "We saw a man in the forward section, trapped. We got through the tail section hole. He was lying on his right side with his right leg pinned underneath him, partly beneath a seat. His head was under another seat.

"His right arm was broken and pinned underneath his back. We removed the debris that covered him, but we couldn't use our axes for fear of making sparks.

"The ship was full of gasoline fumes. A spark would have finished us all. We finally got him out by tearing away the bent metal and seats with our hands. Some of the boys got cut doing it."

to. One man, I held a tourniquet on him when I saw I couldn't get him out.

"The boats were there in 10 or 15 minutes. We could hear them, but we couldn,t see them and they couldn't see us because of the fog."

Asked if he was afraid of anything after the crackup, Hensley said:

"The only thing we were afraid of was fire."

Hensley said he had spent seven-and-a-half years in the Navy. His present assignment is aboard the USS Worchester, now at the Brooklyn Navy Yard.

Clad in pajamas and a red bathrode, he stood quietly beside Buchanan and answered the barrage of questions in a calm, composed voice.

Red Science a Joke, Yugoslav Official Says

Ljubljana, Yuloslavia, Dec. 12 (U.P.)—Foreign Minister Edward Kardelj told the Slovene Academy of Sciences today that Russian science "has now become a joke in the eyes of the world's scientists."

Soviet science, Kardelj said, takes the attitude that it is infallible and has no limits. The Soviet brand of science, he said, has no right to claim a leading role in the international field.

Bolling Base 'Crash Ward' Passes Test

The Bolling Air Force Base "crash ward," kept on a standby basis, was put to its greatest test last night after the Potomac River crash of the Capital Airlines plane.

The disaster unit, built for just such emergencies, has 16 beds and occupies one wing of the station hospital. Double doors open to an ambulance driveway to speed transport of stretcher cases to the waiting beds.

Within the ward are kept all the equipment and supplies for shock and burn therapy and surgical care, fracture beds for broken bodies, plasma and plasma stands for immediate infusions, oxygen equipment for failing lungs, and a suction machine to draw out blood or other fluids from breathing channels.

The crash ward was put into operation about two years ago. It was designed by Maj. Howard R. Lawrence, then flight surgical chief at the hospital, who also has designed a mobile operations cart to speed surgical care when even seconds are precious.

Roughly resembling a kitchen table, the cart is compartmented to its rollers with drawers and shelves. At one end, swivel rods hold "blood pails" and a plaster bucket for on-the-spot mixing of plaster for casts.

Both sides of the operations cart are the same, with surgical supplies identically packed in corresponding drawers, permitting one or more surgeons to work with a minimum of interference.

The ward got its first real workout during the Thanksgiving holidays in 1948. At that time a crash at the Andrews Base sent five victims there when a light bomber, landing in rain and fog, hit a C-45 as it taxied on the Andrews Base

C & P Earnings Exceed 5%, Expert Says

Richmond, Va., Dec. 12 (AP).—A consulting economist today told the State Corporation Commission the Chesapeake and Potomac Telephone Co. of Virginia should not be permitted to charge its customers rates based on recent extraordinary postwar conditions.

Dr. John Bauer of New York, testifying for objectors to C. & P.'s proposed four-million-dollar rate boost, said any new rate should be based on long-term conditions. A rate fixed according to conditions due directly to the war would not be fair, Bauer said.

He presented figures purporting to show the company enjoyed a relatively high rate during the depression period and paid an 8 percent dividend between 1929 and 1935, 9 percent in 1936, 1937 and 1938 and 8 percent again in 1939.

In a second exhibit, Dr. Bauer said the company's returns were adjusted properly in view of its extraordinary expense items and its relatively high pension charges. He said the company had a net return in 1939 of 7.37 percent, in 1945, 6.29 percent; in 1946, 6.71 percent; in 1947, 7.27 percent, and in 1948, 7.54 percent.

Bauer insisted the company earned $2,042,740 in excess of 5 percent during 1948. A 5-percent return, he said, would have yielded $4,023,780.

The commission was told the objectors—including the League of Virginia Counties and 27 localities—also would attack C. & P.'s depreciation charges, its interstate toll expenses and the prices paid to the American Telephone and Telegraph Company for general service and licenses.

County Backs Aid for Land

The Montgomery County Civic Federation last night adopted a resolution supporting legislation now being prepared for Congress asking Federal relief for local communities where the Federal Government has acquired property and thus reduced tax revenue.

The federation is asking the county council and the board of education to use every effort to insure that needs of Montgomery County will be adequately provided for in this pending legislation. Other civic federations in Greater Washington will be encouraged to give similar support to the legislation.

The federation voted against an emergency resolution protesting the Washington Suburban Sanitary Commission's recent ruling that all repairs on water and sewer connections from homes to main lines be made by property owners. The federation referred the resolution to its public utilities committee on the grounds that it had heard only one side of the situation, as a complaint from the Long Branch Citizens Association.

Glover Park Backs Drive On Gambling

The Glover Park Citizens Association last night unanimously passed a resolution praising the United States District Attorney's office for its antigambling campaign.

The group, meeting at the Stoddert School, 39th and Calvert sts. nw., tabled a vote on the Kefauver bill for home rule.

Principal speaker at the meeting was Culver B. Chamberlain, a member of the District Board of Zoning Adjustment, who declared that "parking in the District is a problem not exceeded by any other for urgency."

American University

The reduction of the number of buses on the crosstown line will not affect rush-hour frequency of buses, the American University Park Citizens Association was told last night.

The cut, from 90 to 83 a day, went into effect December 10.

Meeting at American University, the association was addressed by Dr. Thomas R. Wilson, director of the areas division of the Commerce Department's Office of International Trade.

Garfield-Douglas

The Garfield-Douglas Heights Citizens Association last night called for immediate transfer of all Cardozo High School to Central High School.

They also protested against a proposal to transfer 500 girls from Cardozo to Park View Elementary. The meeting was held at Turner School, Stanton rd. and Alabama ave. ne.

None Will Concede Truman Partook Of Ostrich Omelet

Key West, Fla., Dec. 12 (U.P.)—The big question at the winter White House tonight was whether President Truman has been breakfasting on ostrich eggs.

A few days ago friends of the President in Fort Lauderdale sent him two fresh ostrich eggs. One of the thick-shelled eggs was punctured, emptied and served for breakfast.

White House Secretary William D. Hassett admitted to that much. But he would not say whether the President had tried the ostrich omelet. He would say nothing beyond "they were delicious."

Apparently Hassett feared some sort of adverse reaction from the poultry men of America if he admitted that the President had been eating anything but chicken eggs. Charles G. Ross, the press secretary, made a point several days ago that the Chief Executive had "chicken eggs" for breakfast.

Greenbelt Budget Increased $12,000 Over '49 Total

The budget for the city of Greenbelt next year will be $225,683.72, an increase of $12,000 over 1949, a public budget hearing was told last night.

The increase will bring the tax rate per $100 assessment to $3.25. With no objections from the public at the hearing, the Greenbelt council will vote on the budget next Monday.

CIO Rejects Offer Of Ford Co. of Canada

Windsor, Ont., Dec. 12 (U.P.)—The United Auto Workers (CIO) today flatly rejected a Ford Motor Company of Canada offer of a wholly company-financed pension plan which would give $55 a month to employes who retire at 65 after 30 years service. "We still want $100 pensions," Roy England, president of the local union, said.

Parley on Slum Clearance Stirs Hope for a Start Soon

civic and business groups will be heard.

Among these will be citizens of the Marshall Heights area in East Washington, where officials sought to launch the first postwar redevelopment project, but met sharp opposition from residents and refusal by Congress to grant funds.

Two main themes were heard in testimony last night: (1) that there is still a chance to carry out the Marshall Heights program and (2) that immediate efforts should be made to begin slum clearance elsewhere in Washington. Still to be heard, and ready to be given, was the renewed declaration by Marshall Heights citizens that they are as opposed as ever to the redevelopment plan for their area.

Sees Objections Resolved

Mark Lansburgh, chairman of the penniless District Redevelopment Land Agency created by Congress in 1946 to clear Washington slums, told Sparkman he believes Marshalls Heights is still the place to start and "present objections to it can be resolved without too much difficulty."

In contrast, John Ihlder of the National Capital Housing Authority, declared immediate emphasis by Lansburgh's agency and the National Capital Park and Planning Commission should be given to finding areas for 4000 low-rent public housing units NCHA is seeking to build under the National Housing law. He said contracts for them must be placed during the next 22 months.

Hilliyard R. Robinson, chairman of the recently created NCPPC coordinating committee on redevelopment and housing, said his group feels a start in redevelopment may best be made in an area close to the Capitol "if investigation shows this to be practical."

He presented to Sparkman a statement of the program and proceedures his group has worked out against the time when funds may be available to carry out a project. The statement said at one point that Congressional action so far has made it necessary to abandon the idea of starting slum clearance in the outlying areas and that "a new program must be developed."

Misunderstanding Seen

Maj. Gen. U. S. Grant, former chairman of the NCPPC, and John Nolen, jr., NCPPC planning director, presented details of the Marshall Heights project. Grant said he felt the opposition by homeowners of Marshall Heights to the redevelopment project had been based on misunderstanding.

"I have the greatest sympathy with the desire of the people in this area to remain homeowners," said Grant." I question whether they should remain owners of homes which are substandard. If the plan is carried out, they will remain homeowners if proper measures are taken to provide inexpensive homes, as has been done in other cities."

District Engineer Commissioner Gordon R. Young pointed out that since the Marshall Heights project was officially approved, a mandatory freeze has been in force on all other improvements in the area, both public and private.

"It's a very difficult situation," he said. "The only way out I can see is to drop the project, or for Congress to provide the redevelopment money."

If the redevelopment plan is dropped, said General Young, residents of Marshall Heights as well as the District government will face heavy expense in providing needed water, sewer and street improvements.

He outlined the problem with figures presented at the request of Larry Henderson, aide to Senator Ralph E. Flanders (R., Vt.), who has teamed with Sparkman to seek action on the District slum problem.

Harold Kemp, District director of sanitary engineering, said sewers and water service with the present street layout would cost about $1,300,000, slightly less than the $1,400,000 needed for these in the layout proposed in the redevelopment project.

As for streets, L. M. Hedgecock, deputy engineer of streets, said it would cost $1,900,000 to develop the existing system; $770,000 to provide the streets in the redevelopment plan.

General Young estimated there would be additional costs to property owners of some $600,000 or more for retaining walls and other work if the present "silly layout" of streets were developed. Hedgecock said between $100,000 and $200,000 of the cost of developing the present streets would be assessed against home owners.

Everett L. Edmond, president of the Marshall Heights Civic Association, said that for a community, many of whose members are artisans, the cost estimates of officials were probably high. What costs there were, he said, would be minor compared with the bigger problem—"keeping our homes."

Reuther Sees Reds Aided by French Policy

Paris, Dec. 12 (NYHT).—Walter Reuther, president of the United Automobile Workers, said today that "the French policy of freezing wages and not prices is intolerable and can aid only the Communists."

Reuther, here from the London convention which created the anti-Communist International Confederation of Free Trade Unions, said France's economic situation would improve "if as much effort were put into the question of the worker's family budget as on the balancing of the government budget."

One on the Aisle—

They've Got Mickey On Wheels at Last

By Richard L. Coe

MICKEY ROONEY has found a new setting for his brash youth characterization in "The Big Wheel," now on the Capitol screen.

It's that most obscure of sports, auto racing. Obscure, I say, in regard to its classification as a sport. Auto racing is covered by the press as a sports event, hundreds of thousands seem to consider it a sport and "The Big Wheel" puts up a moving case.

I must admit I find it hard to consider racing around in those taut, fine little machines, risking life or at least limbs, a sport. It seems to me closer to total insanity than most other public exhibitions, though I'm perfectly willing to confess that the better grades of playacting probably strike some people as silly as auto-racing strikes me.

Anyway, in "The Big Wheel" Mickey plays a hot shot who's doing well in the trade until he jumps the yellow flag and kills a friend in a crash. This breaking of the rules (yes, there are rules and good ones to put auto racing in the sports category) loses him his standing and he's a friendless little guy.

However, coming East from California for the big jobs, he makes it all up by thoroughly sportsmanlike behavior during the Indianapolis Memorial Day classic. So impressed is the winning driver by Mickey's sportsmanship that, though the fellow came in third, he passes the winning trophy along to him.

So, preconceived as you may admit your feelings may be about auto racing, "The Big Wheel" dramatizes that there are rules of the game, that auto racing is, indeed a sport.

Needless to say, there are some wildly exciting racing scenes during the picture, best of which is unquestionably that Indianapolis climax. The shots at the track are grand and Ernest Laszio has kept his cameras whirring in all conceivable spots. Nine cameras covered that 500-mile race last spring and you couldn't ask for better seats than those cameras have selected.

Thomas Mitchell plays an old-timer at racing car mechanics and musical comedy's Mary Hatcher is a gal who'd rather tinker with racing cars than anything.

The picture, by the way, has, for one third of its production set-up, Jack Dempsey, his first venture into full-length feature movies. He says he has ideas for others.

Owen McGiveny, that quick-change artist whose act has been a standby for a generation of vaudeville fans, headlines the stage bill, with Fred Lowery, Sid and Al Reis and Ross and the Hightower brothers.

"COME ACROSS," the Princeton Club's fifty-eighth production will play Lisner Auditorium the night of Wednesday the 21st, with seats going on sale Thursday at the United Nations Club . . . Triangle Club prexy, Robert Abernethy, a Washingtonian of 1673 Columbia rd., says that this year's Triangle show is more plot-conscious than most have been in the past; it's a light story, says he, but the songs and dances tell some of it as well as the words . . . Though a star of last year's "All in Favor," Abernethy this year won't be appearing . . . Too much to do just tying the show together.

"THE BIG WHEEL," a United Artists release, produced by Harry M. Poplin. Samuel H. Stiefel and Mort Briskin, directed by Edward Ludwig. Screenplay by Robert Smith. At the Capitol.

Choking on Milk Causes Death of Baby, 8 Months

Asphyxiation caused by choking on milk which entered her windpipe yesterday caused the death of Carol Jean Hardy, 8 months old, Dr. Richard M. Rosenberg, deputy coroner, reported. He said he would issue a certificate of accidental death.

The mother, Mrs. Nellie Hardy, said she fed the child milk about 10 a. m., then put her in a bassinete in the Hardy's basement apartment at 1307 Fairmont st. nw., according to police.

An hour later the mother discovered the child unconscious and called police and firemen, who tried vainly to revive the infant.

Nats, Yanks Sit on Key Deal to Big League Trades

This Morning

—With Shirley Povich

NEW YORK, DEC. 12.—For some reason that is vague, the Nats are playing hard to get in these trade talks at the winter baseball meetings, forgetting that they were easy to take last summer. They're in the ridiculous position of an eighth-place ball club that is standing pat. At least thus far, they are.

Povich

In contrast are the Yankees, the team that won the pennant and can best afford to be a little smug about it. But the Yankees aren't. They haven't made a deal yet but they are the most active negotiators at the meetings.

The fact that they don't have a solid first baseman has the Yankees in a state of mild alarm. Seemingly imperturbable are the Nats, who don't have a second baseman, a pitching staff or any kind of a .300 hitter. The timid attempts of Clark Griffith to make a deal have fetched nothing.

Griffith is moaning that the other clubs want his two stars, Ray Scarborough or Eddie Robinson. And that's exactly right, they do. The Nats have nothing else with which to make a deal and they have to face it.

TO RETURN from these winter sessions empty handed ought to be pretty dismaying for Griffith. There was a general and rising clamor against the Washington club's ownership last summer, the roughest season Griffith ever put in, in his 38 years in Washington.

The old gentleman was hurt and alarmed.

He had to do something quickly, so he bought Irv Noren, a Coast League outfielder, for $70,000 and brought Bucky Harris back for a fourth term as manager. The Harris appointment was well-received and served to renew the flagging confidence of Washington fans. But aside from Noren, Griffith has made no move toward giving the customers a better ball team.

The Nats' big need, as Harris sees it, is a second baseman. Harris, who used to be a second baseman himself, appreciates the value of a good man at the job and understands how a weak second sacker can mess a team up generally. He wants George Stirnweiss of the Yankees, who is "available," and is in favor of gambling on the departure of Eddie Robinson in a Stirnweiss deal.

GRIFFITH SAYS the Yankees are asking too high a price for Stirnweiss, whom they would send to the Nats along with First Baseman Dick Kryhoski and Pitcher Don Johnson for Robinson and a Washington outfielder. But the Nats are virtually compelled to take some kind of a gamble and at least they would be credited with a solid effort to bolster their team.

Right now they're in the position of a poker player who has lost his shirt every night in the week and then coming up to the final night's session insists on a mere dime limit. He isn't going to get it back that way. The Nats are slightly overboard, too. They're losers and they can never finish worse than eighth. In their spot a club can't be coy.

It's a sad reflection to recall that in the last half of the 1949 season—in their last 77 games—the Nats won only 16. If they were one of the clubs with a big and productive farm system and could look to the future on that basis it would be different. But their farms are laughable talent-wise and hold no solution to the Nats' immediate plight.

STIRNWEISS and KRYHOSKI would make the Nats look a mite more formidable than last year's sad outfit even at the cost of Robinson. Certainly there was no complaint with big Eddie's performance last season and indeed if it had not been for Robby there is wonder to what depths the Nats might have sunk. But first basemen have never been as hard to replace as second baseman.

Kryhoski is a clever fielder and he couldn't actually be labeled a flop when the Yankees sent him to the Coast League in June. He was hitting over .300 at the time. The Yankees were simply frantic to bolster their pennant chances with a seasoned performer and brought Tommy Henrich in from the outfield. When Kryhoski went to the Coast League he hit at a .328 pace. He wouldn't be miscast at the Nats' first baseman.

And Stirnweiss would look important around second base for the Nats, at least in contrast to Al Kozar and Sherry Robertson he would. He's no great power with the bat but he makes all the plays. Including the double plays. And being a Yankee, he has that wonderful quality of impatience with defeat.

TERPS' STARS, OLD AND NEW—Maryland's athletic greats of today and yesterday gathered at the Touchdown Club last night as the Washington "M" club honored the stars of past and present. In the line, left to right, are Mike Stevens, halfback and captain of the football team which beat Yale in 1926; Ray Krouse, All-American tackle on the present squad; Benny Alperstein, intercollegiate lightweight champion in 1938; Warren Rabbitt, tree-sport star in the early thirties; Dr. Julie Radice, whom Dr. H. C. Byrd, Maryland president, calls "the greatest all around athlete I ever coached"; Tommy Webb, center on the 1934 team; and Don Adams, end on the 1926 club. In the backfield, left to right, Joe Tucker, quarterback on the present 'Gator Bowl team; Knocky Thomas, who scored two touchdowns in the 1926 victory; Arthur Cook, present Olympic rifle champion; Bozie Berger, three-time All-America basketball and baseball player; and Charlie Keller, of New York Yankees fame. More than 500 "M" club members and friends turned out for the affair

Honor Him at Banquet

Touchdown Club Selects Krouse Top Area Player

TACKLE RAY KROUSE of the University of Maryland, has been selected the Washington area's outstanding college football player of the year and will receive the Touchdown Club Trophy at the club's annual dinner January 7.

The selection of Krouse, 214-pound Washingtonian who was voted on the Associated Press' second All-America team, was announced yesterday by President Lee Field of the Touchdown Club, at the club's last weekly football season luncheon.

Krouse is the second Maryland player to be honored in three years. Halfback Lu Gambino, now with the Baltimore Colts was similarly honored in 1947.

Field also announced that Kyle Rote, SMU's brilliant tailback, would be cited for the outstanding individual performance of 1949 for his sensational play in SMU's 27-20 loss to Notre Dame. Rote scored all three SMU touchdowns.

Cooper Wins Over Osario

Jimmy Cooper avenged one of the few losses in his boxing career last night, banging out a unanimous 10-round decision over Filberto Osario, of Puerto Rico, at Turner's Arena.

It was a close battle throughout, with no knockdowns and more wrestling than punching.

Cooper weighed 126 to his opponent's 124½.

Classy Gene Smith, former national amateur featherweight champion, turned professional on last night's card and needed only 2 minutes and 50 seconds to dispose of his first pro opponent.

Smith, at 122½, turned in a speedy and impressive technical knockout over Baltimore's Joe Camarita, 122. Smith had his foe on the deck soon after the bout started and it was soon stopped by Referee Eddie LaFond with Camarita out on his feet.

A slim crowd of 691 paid a gross gate of $1275.85, net $947.15, to view the action.

Pat Thomas, 132½, another local amateur champ, won by TKO over Miami's Jackie Earl, 135, in 34 seconds of the second round of a scheduled five. Another five-rounder went to Johnny Holt, 167½, Washington, by split decision over Benny Droll, 161, Philadelphia.

Haas Beats Bob Hamilton

Miami, Fla., Dec. 12 (AP).—Freddie Haas, jr., captured the second major tournament of his professional golfing career today by defeating Bob Hamilton by two strokes in an 18-hole playoff for the championship of Miami's twenty-sixth annual $10,000 golf tournament.

The former National Intercollegiate champion from New Orleans carded a one under par 35-34—69 against Hamilton's one over par 35-36—71.

Haas received $2000 first money and Hamilton, eighth ranking money winner from Landover, Md., received $1400 as runner-up.

The two had battled on even terms since the third round of the tournament when they turned in 11 under par 199's for 54 holes. In the final round yesterday, they both blazed a five-under-par 65 to deadlock at a record-shattering 264—three strokes under the tournament record set in 1937 by Sam Snead.

Hamilton suffered a bad case of putting jitters and lost all of his holes on short putts.

Colonials Beat W&L By 83-68

Phil McNiff got hot in the second half and dropped in seven field goals to lead George Washington to an 83-68 win over Washington and Lee last night at Eastern High School in a Southern Conference game.

McNiff led the Colonial scoring with 21 points and Johnnie Moffatt and Ace Adler each contributed 15 points as George Washington won its third game against one loss.

Jay Handlon with 21 points and Bob Goldsmith with 18 were high for Washington and Lee as the Generals lost their second straight Southern Conference game on a northern swing.

In a preliminary game G. W. Frosh, led by Tex Silverman's 31 points, downed Fort Myer, 74-64.

No One Else Knows

Bergman Says Irish, Army Have Agreed to Play Again

Arthur J. (Dutch) Bergman, onetime Notre Dame star, now sportscaster for station WRC-NBC, had himself a whale of a scoop last night, if it stands up.

Bergman said on his nightly program that Army and Notre Dame have agreed to resume football relations.

But at a late hour, Bergman was the only man who could be found that knew anything about this reported renewal of a rivalry between two of the Nation's finest elevens.

Bergman said that the agreement was reached here Saturday at a conference between Gen. J. Lawton Collins, Army Chief of Staff, and Rev. John J. Cavanaugh, president of Notre Dame.

This roundup of comment followed:

Collins: "Father Cavanaugh and I did have a chat Saturday. We are old friends. We did not discuss football. I have more important things to do than schedule football games. That is a matter for the superintendent of the Academy (Maj. Gen. Bryant F. Moore)."

(Father Cavanaugh was in Washington to attend the Gridiron Club's annual dinner).

Coach Earl (Red) Blaik, at West Point: "I haven't the slightest idea how that story got started. I haven't heard anything about it. Please read it to me. I am sure if anything like that were in the wind, I would have been consulted."

Charles Callahan, sports publicity director: "We don't know a thing about it here at Notre Dame. Coach Frank Leahy hasn't returned from the coast and Father Cavanaugh is not available tonight. But Moose Krause hasn't heard anything, and it's his job to make the schedule as athletic director."

Bergman, on his program, said that the new Army-Notre Dame series probably will not start until 1952 or 1953, and will be a "home and home" arrangement, staying away from larger cities which might want the games.

Parker Quits As Cards Coach

Chicago, Dec. 12 (AP).—Raymond (Buddy) Parker, coach of the Chicago Cardinals for only seven games, today resigned from that position.

Parker had been head coach of the dethroned Western Division champions of the National Football League since October 24. He had started the season as cocoach with Phil Handler, who was promoted to club vice presidency when Parker was named head coach.

Parker said the Cardinals' 52-21 trimming by the Chicago Bears yesterday had nothing to do with his decision to resign.

The Chicago Tribune, however, quoted Parker as saying immediately after the Bears' game: "The humiliating defeat by George Halas and the Bears is causing me to tender this resignation. I consider the Cardinal personnel superior to that of the Bears, so the loss must

Nichols Has 15.3 Average

Big Jack Nichols continues to pace the Washington Caps scoring parade with 276 points in 18 starts for an average of 15.3. Freddie Scolari holds down second place with a 12.8 average and then the averages drop off to Chick Reiser at 8.4.

The Caps meet the St. Louis Bombers at Uline Arena tomorrow night. The Bombers feature Easy Ed MacAuley, giant center with a 13.7 average over 18 games. John Logan, Bomber forward, will be sidelined with a pinched right leg muscle.

A's, Tigers, Chisox Wait For Griff to Make a Move

By Shirley Povich
Post Reporter

New York, Dec. 12.—The Washington Club and the Yankees are sitting on a key deal, that if made, would open the gates to a series of trades at the major leagues' winter meeting—so say the Tigers, the Browns, the White Sox and the Athletics.

Not until a Washington-Yankee deal is made or collapses are other clubs ready to swing into action, pointed out Frank Lane, general manager of the White Sox.

"I understand the A's have a deal pending with the Yankees, if they don't trade off George Stirnweiss to Washington," said Lane. "Detroit is waiting to see if it can get Stirnweiss in a three-cornered shift from Washington before it makes an offer to the Browns for Gerry Priddy."

Won't Give Up Kryhoski

The Nats' negotiators here, Clark Griffith, Calvin Griffith and Bucky Harris, were not in contact with the Yankees today, but hoped to renew their trade talks later tonight.

From a reliable source it is learned that the nub of the Yankees' resistance to a four-for-two swap involving First Baseman Eddie Robinson of the Nats, is Bucky Harris' demand for First Baseman Dick Kryhoski.

Thus far the Yankees have offered Washington Stirnweiss, First Baseman Joe Collins and Pitcher Don Johnson and a catcher for Robinson and Outfielder Eddie Stewart. Harris has rejected Collins, who was with the Kansas City team last season, and is insisting on Kryhoski, of whom he became fond in the Coast League last season.

Evans Offers Wakefield

On the fringe of the Yankee-Washington negotiations, Manager Billy Evans of the Tigers is waiting, hopeful he can lure Stirnweiss to Detroit, if he is dealt off to the Nats. Reportedly, Evans is offering Outfielder Dick Wakefield in a straight swap for Stirnweiss.

With a second baseman supposedly the chief consideration in any deal Washington makes with the Yanks, Evans apparently is deluding himself that Washington would trade Stirnweiss off. But stranger things have happened.

The White Sox declare that Griffith definitely offered them Pitcher Ray Scarborough, Outfielder Clyde Vollmer, and Infielder Al Kozar for Second Baseman Cass Michaels and either pitchers Bill Pierce or Bob Kuzava.

"And it was very definitely turned down," added Lane.

The Nats-Yankee stalemate is also holding up the A's negotiations with the Yanks. Reportedly the Yanks have offered Third Baseman Bill Johnson, and an outfilder, Johnny Lindell or Gene Woodling, in an effort to pry Pitcher Joe Coleman away from Connie Mack.

But the deal has been snarled by Mack's insistence that Stirnweiss be one of the Yankee tradees.

Harris was in session last night with Manager Casey Stengel of the Yanks. He collared Stengel and suggested, "If our bosses can't get together, let us two make a deal."

The Nats' manager presumed that Stengel would take back to the Yankee bosses the latest Washington proposition. "But he didn't keep the date I had with him today," complained Harris.

Irish, N. C. Play At South Bend

South Bend, Ind., Dec. 12 (AP).—Notre Dame's Fightin' Irish, unbeaten in 10 games this season, will play a nine-game schedule next year.

Southern Methodist which gave the Irish a terrific scare before succumbing 27-20 and Washington, a 27-7 loser, will not reappear on the 1950 slate. The sole newcomer to the Notre Dame card is the University of Pittsburgh.

The 1950 schedule:
Sept. 30—North Carolina at Notre Dame; Oct. 7—Purdue at Notre Dame; Oct. 14—Tulane at New Orleans; Oct. 21—Indiana at Bloomington, Ind.; Oct. 28—Michigan State at Notre Dame; Nov. 4—Navy at Cleveland; Nov. 11—Pittsburgh at Notre Dame; Nov. 18—Iowa at Iowa City; Dec. 2—Southern California at Los Angeles.

48% of Colleges in Favor

Coaches Like 2-Platoon System

(First in a series of three on college football rules and trends)

Mentors of Both Big, Little Schools Say It Has Helped

By Irving T. Marsh
N. Y. Herald Tribune Writer

THE TWO-PLATOON system, the stratagem of football that has agitated the theorists for two years now, is favored by more college coaches than those who oppose.

Forty-eight percent of them, representing colleges of all sizes, ambitions, denominations and sections of the country, believe the two-platoon system has definitely helped football.

Thirty-one percent believe it has definitely hurt.

Thirty-eight percent of the larger colleges think it has hurt.

Fifty percent of the coaches of smaller colleges think it has helped.

Fifty percent of the coaches of the smaller colleges think it has helped.

Fifteen percent of the coaches of the larger colleges think the two-platoon system has helped big colleges and hurt the small.

Only 6 percent of the coaches of the smaller colleges believe the same thing.

This illuminating, and somewhat surprising, set of figures is one of the results of a survey taken by the New York Herald Tribune on three controversial points in the 1949 football playing code.

The survey was made because there seemed to be no agreement about what college coaches really did believe. Harvey Harman of Rutgers, told the Football Writers Association a few weeks ago that 90 percent of the coaches were opposed to the two-platoon.

Other coaches expressed the opinion, vehemently and forcibly, that the two-platoon was the savior of football, a progressive step that has made the game more popular than ever.

SO, questionnaires were sent to more than 500 coaches throughout the country. In addition to the two-platoon system, they were queried on the substitution rule and on how they liked the calling of fouls, particularly the personal foul. Almost 400 coaches answered. The question concerning the two-platoon system asked:

"Do you believe in the two-platoon system and has it helped or hurt football?"

Following is a breakdown of the answers to that question (colleges in the Nation's major conferences and larger independents being listed as big schools; small independents and those in the minor conferences being listed as small):

	BIG		SMALL
	No. of Answers	Pct.	No. of Answers	Pct.
Definitely helped	27	40	148	50
Definitely hurt	26	38	89	31
Helped big, hurt small	10	15	18	6
Neither or both	1	1	20	6
Need more time	4	6	24	7
Totals	68	100	299	100

Making further like George Gallup, an analysis of the answers would show that by far the larger portion of the coaches believe that the two-platoon system has helped the game. Combining all the answers without regard to size of the college, the table would look like this:

	answers	Pct.
Definitely helped	175	48
Definitely hurt	115	31
Helped big, hurt small	28	7.5
Neither or both	21	6
Need more time to decide	28	7.5
	367	100

Only 31% Think Offensive, Defensive Substituting Hurts

THERE ARE OTHER conclusions that might reasonably be drawn from these figures:

Small college coaches think, despite the arguments that opponents of the two-platoon system have advanced, they have been helped by it. About as many coaches of the larger colleges feel that football has definitely been hurt by the two-platoon as those who feel that it has definitely helped, but when the "helped large-hurt small" classification is added it can be seen that more of them are in favor of it for themselves than there are opposed to it.

Most amazing, however, was the vehemence with which small college coaches supported it, even though a good many admitted they did not use it.

Those who favored the two-

Pablo Pushes Vets for Job At Gonzaga

Father Joseph M. Geib, S. P., director of athletics at Gonzaga, is all in favor of bettering foreign relations, especially if it will bring him any more basketbal players like Marcellino Pablo.

Pablo is a Filipino spending his first year in this country. He played basketball at Jesuit High in Manila and when his parents moved to this country he accompanied them.

The 5-ft.-11-in. senior is pushing for a place on the starting five but as yet is only rated as a top reserve. However, his set shooting and smooth ball handling ability may soon put him on top.

Other players Father Geib is counting on this year are Mike Nolan and Jerry LeCompte, 6-foot-3 forwards, Ralph Bram, a 6-foot-4 center and Frank DeGriolamo and John Byrne at guards.

Paul McGowan, Carroll Kenney and Dave Gardiner join Pablo on the list of reserves.

be a reflection on my coaching ability."

"I wanted my status established," said Parker. "I wanted to learn whether I was to be real head coach next season in full charge of players. Mrs. Bidwill (Mrs. Charles Bidwill, widow of the late club owner) wouldn't give me a direct answer. She said she wanted to wait and see. I've decided not to wait and today I told her I'm quitting football and returning to my home in Kemp, Tex."

Assistant Coach Dick Plasman resigned along with Parker.

Parker, who joined the Cardinals as a player in 1937, directed the club to four victories, two defeats and one tie in his seven-game sojourn as top man. For the season, the Cardinals finished with 6-5-1, after winning the 1948 Western Division title and losing the league playoff to the Philadelphia Eagles.

Charles Awarded Neil Plaque

New York, Dec. 12 (AP).—By unanimous vote, the New York Boxing Writers Association today awarded the Edward J. Neil Memorial boxing plaque for 1949 to National Boxing Association Heavyweight Champion Ezzard Charles.

Since 1938 the award has been given annually to the boxer or boxing figure who, in the opinion of the writers, has done the most for the sport during the year. Neil, Associated Press boxing writer in the early 30s, was killed in 1937 while serving as a war correspondent in Spain, and the award was set up in his memory.

3-Year-Old Pays Mutuel Of $22.80

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

Charles Town, W. Va., Dec. 12. Molasses Phil, out of the mare Molasses Jane, wasn't as slow as molasses here today. On the contrary, the 3-year-old worked up stretch speed and came on to take all the gravy in a three-way photo finish.

Carrying the silks of Frank Percope in a field of seven, Molasses Phil poured a neck defeat on E. Boyd's Pink Chance. A nose farther back came J. W. Seibel's Little Rocket to be third.

Jockey Willie Downs rode Molasses Phil in the test named the Frederick Purse, his mount paying a $22.80 mutuel after the crowd had dumped the majority of money on Mrs. J. B. Hatfield's Paint and Powder, a filly who showed almost nothing under the handling of Sammy Palumbo.

Performing over a track that was sloppy as the result of rain last night and today, the winning son of Vincentive, incidently bred at nearby Frederick, Md., by W. L. Brann, was clocked in 1:52 4/5.

Winner Rallies

Pink Chance circled the leaders to get to the front after a quarter and had all the appearances of a winner entering the stretch. However, Downs roused Molasses Phil and the gelding came through on the rail to stick his neck in front. Little Rocket also rallied and would have been second in another jump.

The race brought Downs his ninth winner but he failed to gain on Apprentice Dick Lawless, the saddle sensation of the meeting thus far. Lawless rode three winners to bring his seven-day total to 13.

Lawless Gets Started

He opened the program, getting home on top with Shangrila Stable's Chance Bras, a $4.20 favorite. He lost a photo while riding S. B. Webb's Silair in the second as Frank Smith's Lenwell was the winner at $6.60 and completed a $17.80 daily double.

Lawless annexed the fourth on Mrs. G. A. Saportas, jr.'s High Heart, paying $8.20 and came back in the next event to take top money on the $4.40 favorite, W. Sedlacek's Falsely.

AT CHARLES TOWN

DEAR FOLKS: I have never met a turf fan, who, if pressed for an honest answer, wouldn't confess having a secret yen to own a horse. Being an owner is expensive if for investment or hobby. Some end the year in the black, but just as many, if not more, are in the red after a season's campaigning. For instance, at the recent Bowie meeting there were 2500 horses either there or at Laurel or Pimlico seeking to take a crack at the purses. Around Charles Town there are an estimated 700 horses. While the purses here are considered adequate for the business, owners lose $20,000 on the meeting. Breaking it down there's $8000 purse money for 15 days or $120,000. Costs $10 a day to feed and train each horse. Considering they are here for 20 days, that's $140,000. But tell a horseman he can't have stalls and he will build some with his bare hands.—BILL.

Coaches Favor Platoon System

platoon system advanced most frequently the argument that it gave more boys a chance to play. That was far and away the most popular point. Others were that it lessened the chance of injuries, that it took advantage of specialists and thus made for better football and for a speedier game of football, that it has increased scoring (which spectators like).

Remarked one coach of a small college: "We dress 35 men. We use the complete two-platoon system and we will have 27 lettermen. Not one serious injury all year. It is our salvation and our boys love it."

SAID ANOTHER: "Look at the gate receipts. I don't think the two-platoon is as bad as some sports writers make it. In fact the only ones hurt, I think, are the sports writers and radio broadcasters."

And another: "My players feel it helps them play a better game. After all it is their game."

Perhaps the most logical of the reasons for the use of the two-platoon was advanced by more than a score of the smaller college coaches. It will teach us, they said, to play in our own class.

The most forthright summation for the two-platoon was made by H. P. (Speed) Owen of Culver-Stockton College, of Canton, Mo. He wrote: "I would like to express my opinion on the platoon system. I think it is O. K. Some of these cry baby coaches in the big time want their cake but don't know how to eat it.

"We should play in our own class—like poker, have something or stay out of the pot.

THE PLATOON system gives better football both offensively and defensively. All you have to do is to look at the scores. A big boy that is fresh is better physically able to give a good account of himself. A tired boy will loaf and a loafer will get hurt and then the wolves will yell because the game is too rough.

"What we really need is a set of rules more nearly like the pros. They have the game the public wants. Colleges have more crowds due to old grad set-up at the schools participated.

"Football will be much better if some of the fool rules committees will make them simple and quit having personalities entering into the picture."

The dissidents expressed their opposition forcibly, too. Their chief complaint was that it tended to destroy all-around play, that fewer and fewer complete football players are produced. Others:

"It is unfair to small schools. It is contrary to the philosophy of football. Fox example, we teach the desire to take the ball away from the opponents in order to play offense, but the defensive player is regarded by a seat on the bench."

"THE RULE is good only for for the coach, not for the boy, not for the game, not for the spectators. Let's pick two all-America team, one offense, one defense. The boy loses his personality. Every good player wants to play as much as he can. If I had to play today only on offense or only on defense I would tell the coach to go to . . . !"

"Defensive men never learn to block, offensive men never learn to tackle, spectators never learn who is playing."

"I'm of the opinion that offensive rulings have far outweighed defensive rulings, with two-platoon football magnifying the differences between teams all out of proportion to their real differences."

"Makes football a sissy game."

"The rich get richer and the poor get new coaches."

"Makes for a game so highly specialized it has ceased to be a game.

THE ENTIRE case for the antis was most eloquently summed up by Clyde B. Smith, of Indiana. He wrote:

"I sincerely believe that the two-platoon system has taken many of the fine things out of football that we as football coaches have always intended to develop. It was never to become a game of specialists. It is not necessary any more for a boy to pride himself on being able to go 60 minutes and to be able to outlast his opponent.

"There was one time in the history of the game when a team with a limited number of men might hope to spring an upset if they were able to consciously think their way through the game, if they were in better condition, if they had the will to win.

"Today in football many of the games are pretty much decided before the teams step on the field. It becomes a matter of who has the manpower. They say that it gives those boys an opportunity to play who couldn't perhaps play on offense.

This may be true, but on the other hand it would pretty well even itself off the other way and a boy then would have the trend and experience of having to develop as an all-around player which he doesn't have to today.

"I FEEL very definitely that the boys are being cheated. We say we exploit our material by the two-platoon system. I believe the coaches are exploiting themselves. Many boys are going to go through their entire playing careers and play only on an offensive or defensive unit. What about those men who wish to go into athletics as a coach? It is going to be pretty tough to coach offensive football if you have never had the experience of playing on the offense.

"I believe it has taken some of the competition for positions out of the game.

"Then, too, we have the argument that it helps to prevent injuries to those boys who become tired. I think this is a fallacy. What about the kids who are playing on a team with a limited amount of manpower who have to take it and stay in there on Saturday afternoon when they are outmanned and have to play a team that has three or four teams?

"You must also remember that the two-platoon system must have its reserves. This means that the big universities who used to get along with a squad of 30 men must have now have 50 men. I am wondering if they are drawing off players that might be playing at some other college and enjoying their football.

"There was a time in the history of the game when a boy and a team knew that if it were able to think clearly it might outsmart its opponents. Now a boy isn't in the game long enough to adjust himself to the game situation. The game in most cases is being master-minded by the coaches. This is still a boy's game."

Coaltown 'Horse of Year'

Baltimore, Dec. 12 (AP).—Calumet Farm's Coaltown drew even today with Greentree's Capot in their paper racing for "horse of the year."

The 4-year-old Coaltown beat out his one-year younger rival in the fourteenth annual poll by the Turf and Sport Digest, a Baltimore publication.

Capot earlier had been voted the honor by the Daily Racing Form.

Coaltown drew 102 of the 203 votes cast by reporters and radio and television announcers in the digest poll. Calumet's 3-year-old star, Ponder, got 21 and the remaining votes were divided among six others.

National Opens With Night Game

New York, Dec. 12 (AP).—The National League baseball season will open at night in St. Louis in 1950 with the Cardinals playing the Pittsburgh Pirates at Sportsman's Park, April 18.

This will the the first time in major league history that an opener has been scheduled at night.

Lucas Predicts Short Session Of Congress

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

A short and probably highly controversial election-year session of Congress was predicted yesterday by Senate Democratic Leader Scott W. Lucas, but he failed to spell out a Fair Deal "must" list.

In fact, the Illinois Democrat told a Capitol press conference he does not yet know for sure how much of the Fair Deal program will be pressed. Nor has he yet been consulted on the President's State of the Union message.

He promised a "high priority" in the Senate for the House-passed Social Security expansion but strongly hinted the Senate won't again attempt to repeal the Taft-Hartley Act.

He was similarly doubtful that the Senate would take another fling at farm price support legislation.

Asked if he thought "most" of the Truman Fair Deal program will be enacted, Lucas gave no flat answer.

"I don't know now what is going to come up," he said.

Lucas reminded reporters, however, that several sharply controversial measures left on the calendar when the last session adjourned are already booked for four very talkative rounds:

1. Repeal of the Federal oleomargarine tax. Lucas said he will move to call that up on opening day (January 3) and the Senate will open debate the following day. A dairy bloc filibuster has been threatened, but Lucas said he still hoped to conclude debate in a week.

2. Basing point (freight rate absorption) legislation. Lucas said this almost equally controversial bill will be "laid down" in the Senate January 20.

3. Liberalization of the displaced persons law. Lucas said the bill recommitted last session will be reported back to the Senate January 25. He said that did not necessarily mean the Senate will start consideration of it then.

4. Fair Employment Practices legislation. Lucas said it has been virtually decided to make the initial civil rights test on FEPC, but failed to get a definite date. He said the Senate will call it up "in due course," well before the close of the session.

A reporter asked if the decision to make the test on FEPC might run into charges that the Senate "won't do anything about it" because of the difficulty of invoking cloture against a Southern filibuster.

"Can't Anticipate"

"I can't anticipate how it will be interpreted," Lucas said, adding that no other civil rights measure is ready to move. The anti-poll tax bill is still in a Senate Rules subcommittee he said, and the Administration isn't satisfied with the pending Ferguson version of the anti-lynching bill.

In the largely non-controversial field, he said Government reorganization legislation, in line with the Hoover report, will receive top billing. He predicted Mr. Truman will submit 10 or 12 reorganization plans.

Lucas was chary of making any kind of forecast on some of the more controversial Truman bills.

Asked if the Administration's health insurance bill will reach a vote, for example, he replied:

"I don't know, we'll have to wait and see."

Another newsman wanted to know if Congress might cut back any of the wartime increases in excise taxes. Lucas said that if it did, members would probably have to find new sources of revenue to make up the loss.

Discussing the foreign policy phase of the legislative program, the Senate leader said he expects action on Mr. Truman's "Point Four," the international trade organization agreement, as well as continuation of Marshall Plan aid. He said he favored some reduction in ECA aid if it can be done "without crippling the program." He said he did not know what would be recommended in the way of Atlantic Pact military aid.

D. C. Reconsiders

Conference On Chaplain Fee Planned

The District Commissioners will reconsider a request by the Washington Federation of Churches that the District finance chaplain service at District penal institutions, it was revealed yesterday.

The Rev. Dr. Frederick E. Reissig, executive secretary of the Washington Federation of Churches, told members of the Presbytery of Washington City that a conference with the Commissioners is being arranged, but said no date has been set.

When the federation first made the request, early in November, it was turned down on advice it was "not a function of local government." In addition to asking the District to pay the present chaplain, the federation has recommended employment of two more chaplains to serve District penal institutions.

Cannot Meet Need

Dr. Ressig said the federation is asking the District to take over the service because the need for chaplains is so great it is unable to meet it. More than 23,000 persons passed through District penal institutions last year, he said.

The Presbytery adopted a budget of $10,015.15 for 1950. Of this total, $3441.65 is allotted to the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church, U.S.A., and $809.80 to the Synod of Baltimore.

The remaining $5763.70 will be used for local expenses, including salaries, travel, and committee work of the Presbytery in Greater Washington.

The Presbytery voted unanimously to approve the request of the Rev. Dr. John Bailey Kelly, pastor of Georgetown Presbyterian Church, 3105 P st. nw., to retire on March 1. In approving the request, the members praised Dr. Kelly for his work as a pastor, as president of the College of Emporia, Kans., and as a denominational official.

Two Overtures

Laymen and ministers gave their approval to two overtures sent to the Presbytery by the General Assembly of the church.

One of the overtures would change present regulations of the denomination to give Presbyteries the power to relieve clergymen engaged in secular work from ministerial status after two years.

The second would change the form of government of the church to allow the General Assembly to erect new synods by uniting or dividing presently existing synods when the action was judged necessary.

Both actions must be returned to the General Assembly for final action.

Court-Martial Of 2 Flying Majors Opens

A court-martial of two Andrews Field majors charged with padding their flying time reports began yesterday at Bolling Air Force base with dismissal of four defense motions.

John Alvin Croghan, attorney for Majs. James B. Fishburn of Moscow, Idaho, and James A. McCullough, 6005 State st., Cheverly, Md., presented the motions, which sought continuance or dismissal of the case.

Both majors pleaded innocent. Capt. Harold M. Wilson, assistant operations officer at Andrews, first identified forms used in logging hours and flights and then William J. Conrad, Newark Airport control operator, identified a CAA form covering a C-47 flight piloted by the two majors on September 30.

The officers are charged with reporting jointly at Andrews on October 3 that their flight time was about seven hours, while other records indicated the flights lasted less than three hours. Conviction would make the men liable to dismissal from the service. The trial resumes at 10 a. m. today.

Navy Adds Another Ship To Anti-Snorkel Fleet

The Navy is adding another specially-designed destroyer to its projected experimental fleet of "hunter-killer" ships for fighting the modern menace of the Snorkel submarine.

It announced yesterday the destroyer Carpenter, equipped with the latest secret devices for locating and destroying enemy submersibles, will be commissioned at Norfolk, Va., on Thursday. A sister ship, the Robert A. Owens, was commissioned at Boston November 5.

The Basic Data on

ANTIHISTAMINES vs. THE COLD

Nature of the Common Cold

The common cold is now believed to be caused by a virus, not yet identified, and for which no specific treatment has been discovered. However, physicians have recognized a marked similarity between allergic reactions and many of the early symptoms of colds.

Allergic reactions such as hay fever are caused by overproduction in the body of a chemical called histamine which is released when the offending pollen contacts the nasal passages. This histamine relaxes the capillaries and other small blood vessels and causes the mucous lining of the nasal passages and the eyes to become swollen with excess liquid (edematous). Early signs of this reaction are watery eyes and a running nose.

Nasal secretions of people with colds have been shown to contain twice as much histamine as is found in patients with nasal allergies. This emphasizes the modern allergic concept of the common cold. An editorial in the Journal of the American Medical Association, September 10, 1949 expresses the opinion that cold-susceptible patients often have borderline or concealed allergies, and according to some investigators the early signs of the common cold is actually an allergic response to the cold virus or its products.

Today's concept of the development of the common cold may be outlined as follows:

1. The cold virus comes in contact with the tissues of the upper respiratory tract.
2. An allergic reaction, characterized by a running nose, sneezing, or sniffles, follows.
3. An associated trigger mechanism such as chilling or food to which one is sensitive may stimulate or aggravate allergic reaction.
4. The weeping mucous lining loses its normal protective powers and provides a better breeding place for the cold virus and other bacteria.
5. Further invasion of the body by the fast multiplying bacteria may follow, causing the complications of the common cold.

Thus it is readily seen that counteracting the allergic reaction at the first sign of a cold can break the chain in this course of events.

Since 1945, allergists have known that antihistaminics can counteract histamine to relieve allergic reactions. In an article in the September, 1947 issue of the United States Naval Medical Bulletin, it was reported that antihistaminic therapy in the common cold gave unusually satisfactory results. Subsequently, thousands of cases treated with various antihistaminics by independent investigators confirmed these excellent results. These studies point out several important facts:

a. 70-90% of colds are stopped or alleviated with antihistaminic therapy;

b. effectiveness of treatment depends on prompt institution of therapy;

c. antihistaminics are effective as a group;

d. reduction of sneezing and coughing usually effected regardless of the duration of the cold, may reduce spread of infection by eliminating droplet exposure.

The need for quick action in administering antihistaminics to combat colds is emphasized in various reports. The results show that the greatest percentage of colds were stopped when various antihistamines were administered in the first hour after cold symptoms appeared. Lower percentages of colds were stopped when there was more delay.

Inhiston Therapy

Inhiston is the potent antihistaminic l-phenyl-1-(2-pyridyl)-3-dimethylaminopropane. It has been proven in numerous clinical studies in a variety of allergic conditions. Medical literature has appeared, based on comparative clinical studies, stating that this particular compound is superior to many of the earlier antihistaminics in effectiveness, and absence of side actions.

Laboratory studies show that the therapeutic index—ratio of potency to toxicity—of Inhiston is 135. This compares most favorably with widely used older antihistaminics which range from 48 to 70. This means that the maximum recommended daily dosage of Inhiston is only 60 mg. whereas the recommended dosage of most other antihistaminics must be 100 mg. or more per day for equal effect. Therefore Inhiston's lower effective dosage—10 milligrams per tablet—is of real advantage since it reduces the possibility of side effects.

Inhiston, therefore, is a truly effective antihistaminic to control the allergic reaction created by the cold virus. By counteracting this allergic reaction, Inhiston—taken at the first sign of a cold—may break the chain of events leading to the cold. Taken later, Inhiston can help shorten the duration of the cold and reduce the chance of infecting others by stopping excessive nasal secretions. Its availability without prescription indicates its clinical safety and enables each individual to have it within reach at the very first sign of the common cold, the optimum time to commence antihistaminic therapy.

The Inhiston package is plainly labelled to emphasize when the tablets should be taken and how many should be taken. A separate dosage schedule is given for children.

How You Can Use Inhiston Effectively Against Colds

1. Buy a bottle of Inhiston (36 tablets)—at your druggist immediately and put it in the medicine chest.
2. Get several of the easy-to-carry packets of 12 Inhiston tablets so you and your family can have Inhiston handy at all times, ready to take at first sign of a cold.
3. If you now have a cold, take Inhiston immediately to shorten the duration of the cold and reduce the sneezing, sniffling and coughing. That way your family runs less risk of catching your cold.

NOTE: In any illness, your wisest course is to see your doctor at once. All too often, symptoms associated with colds can be the first signs of more serious illness. If you have chest pains, a marked fever, severe coughing, or other unusual symptoms, stay in bed and call your doctor.

The Federal Diary

No Compromise Seen In Fight to Increase Officials' Hiring Power

More power for Federal officials over their employes was advocated yesterday at the National Reorganization Conference at the Shoreham.

The Citizens Committee for the Hoover Report has no intention of compromising on its recommendation to give Federal officials more authority to recruit, examine, and to select employes.

"We cannot afford to compromise on this major recommendation," spoke Arthur S. Flemming, a former Civil Service commissioner, "if we are going to get better and more expeditious results in recruiting, examining, and selecting persons for Federal positions. Furthermore, we cannot afford to compromise if we are going to have a truly responsible form of government in one of our most important areas of administration."

Former President Herbert C. Hoover backed Flemming's argument when he said, in part:

"At present Red Tape himself dwells in the civil service of 2,200,000 employes. The result is an accumulation of waste and deadwood—and discouragement of good officials. The sword to cut this Gordian knot is to decentralize the engagement and control of these employes into the departments and agencies. This must be done under rules to be established by the Civil Service Commission and enforced by it."

Flemming also proposed that administrators be given more leeway in the development of efficiency rating systems, and in retaining employes "who are really qualified to render outstanding service when it becomes necessary for them to reduce the number of persons on their payrolls.'

"We must also press," Flemming said, "for the development of simple, clear-cut, and intelligent procedures for the discharge of incompetent employes."

The Administration already has accepted several of the Hoover personnel recommendations, but it's cool to the further transfer of personnel authority to agency heads. Veterans' and employe groups also oppose it. Answering its opponents, Flemming said the plan would not undermine the merit system or the Veterans Preference Act, as has been charged repeatedly.

Flemming brought out that the commission has set up 700 agency boards of examiners to recruit and examine people for Federal jobs, a procedure the Hoover group would extend throughout Government. "As a result of this decentralization," Fleming said, "better persons are being recruited for the Federal service and the work is being carried on much more expeditiously.

An overhaul of the Government's accounting system was proposed by T. Coleman Andrews of Richmond, who formerly was in charge of General Accounting's Corporation Unit Division. Andrews said Uncle Sam doesn't have an accounting system "worthy of the name."

"The objective of the Government's present accounting, auditing and financial reporting," he explained, "is merely to ferret out and exposed fraud. The recommendations of the Hoover Commission," he explained, "would add the important objectives of utilizing the techniques of accounting to inform the managers of the Government's affairs about what is being done with the people's money and to enable these men to discharge their duties with economy and benefit to the public."

On the other hand, A. L. M. Wiggins, former Treasury Undersecretary, opposed the accounting part of the Hoover report that would reorganize the accounting operations of GAO and Treasury. He pointed out that a joint GAO-Treasury-Budget Bureau committee was making progress on the problem and he suggested that it be continued for a trial period before making any changes.

Restaurant At Airport Wins Suit

Ex-Teacher Loses Verdict in $10,000 Action Charging Discrimination

A former Dunbar High School teacher yesterday lost a $10,000 damage suit in which she claimed she was denied dining facilities equal to those for whites at National Airport in 1947.

After 20 minutes deliberation, an all-white jury in United States District Court in Alexandria returned a verdict in favor of the defendant, Air Terminal Services, Inc., operator of the airport restaurants.

Mrs. Helen Nash, 1330 13th st. nw., charged she and her doctor-husband were refused service in the terrace dining room of the airport on February 17, 1947, and were instructed to eat instead in a "basement cafeteria" set aside for Negroes.

Husband Testifies

She became "progressively emotionally disturbed" after the incident, to the point of crying and vomiting, according to testimony of her husband, Dr. William Nash. Her mental condition has not been the same since, said William S. Thompson, who represented Mrs. Nash.

The defense, represented by Frederick J. Ball, contended "substantially equal" facilities were offered Mrs. Nash in the airport's segregated cafeteria, where "the same food was served" as that in the terrace dining room and other facilities for white patrons at the airport.

Judge Albert V. Bryan instructed the jury its problem was not concerned with segregation of the races, as required by Virginia law (it has since been abolished at National Airport through a CAA directive).

"Substantially Equal"

Rather, Judge Bryan said, it was the jury's duty to determine if "substantially equal facilities" were provided for both races as required by the fifth amendment to the Constitution.

To satisfy this point of law, he continued, the facilities do not have to be "exactly equal or identical." They must be "equal in value or equivalent."

Judge Bryan's instructions were similar to the basis of an opinion he wrote last week, in which he found that Negroes in the Arlington County High School were not discriminated against because of race or color.

Mrs. Nash taught English at Dunbar High School for 14 years before her resignation in 1945.

'Who Is Running D. C. Schools?' Sharpe Inquires

That's Only Issue, Board Head Says in Thrust at Corning Over Red Magazine

"BABY IT'S COLD OUTSIDE"
YOU WON'T BE STICKING YOUR NECK OUT IF YOU KEEP YOUR DEFROSTER AND WINDSHIELD WIPERS IN WORKING ORDER
NATIONAL SAFETY COUNCIL

The dispute among Board of Education members over the banning of the Soviet Information Bulletin by Schools Superintendent Hobart M. Corning was described yesterday as a question of "who runs the schools."

Board of Education President C. Melvin Sharpe said that the only point at issue is "who is in charge."

The school board president previously had criticized Dr. Corning for failing to notify board members that he had called in copies of the publication received in the mails by District schools.

Adelbert W. Lee, a member of the board, yesterday backed Sharpe in his views.

"Corning seems to feel that the board is a necessary evil that he must tolerate," Lee said. "We are here to run the schools and the superintendent has allegiance to the board."

Lee said that board members were increasingly aware of a "sad lack of cooperation between the superintendent and the board.

"Only in cooperation and in exchange of confidence can we expect to provide a good school system," he said.

Lee said that Sharpe maintains an office in the same building as Dr. Corning but that the school superintendent had "not seen fit" to confer with the board president.

Commenting on the rift with board members, Dr. Corning said there was a question whether he "used good judgment" in not notifying the board.

Not on Approved List

The superintendent said he had no alternative but to withdraw the publications since they were not on the list approved by the school board.

The Soviet publication, he said, has been intercepted in elementary schools as well as in junior and senior high schools throughout the city.

He said he did not know how many issues of the twice-monthly bulletin were involved since the intercepted copies are scattered among the offices of various administrators.

Two members of the board, Mrs. Philip Sidney Smith and Dr. James A. Gannon, have declared Dr. Corning "within his rights" in banning the periodical without school board sanction.

Other members of the board who have sided with Sharpe are Dr. Phillip T. Johnson, Mrs. Velma G. Williams and Albert E. Steinem.

Mrs. Edward C. Magdeburger and John Wilson have not yet expressed their views.

Burglars Rob Men's Store At 13th & F

Safe burglars, who worked out an elaborate pathway to enter the place, stole approximately $5000 from Fred Pelzman's Men's Shop, 13th and F sts. nw., over the weekend. The loss estimate was made by Nat Schoenberg, manager.

Another gang broke into seven Northeast business places over the weekend, six of them within six blocks of each other, but obtained comparatively little loot.

Schoenberg told police the burglary at Pelzman's occurred between 6 p. m. Saturday and 9 a. m. yesterday, when it was discovered by a porter.

Police said the burglars apparently ascended a fire escape on a neighboring building, crossed roofs, broke in a third-floor window of the Pelzman store, and then made their way to a cashier's office.

There, they overturned the safe and hammered in the bottom to get the money.

In the Northeast entries, the burglars went away empty-handed from five places.

They were: Curtin & Johnson, Inc., paving contractors, 1125 Brentwood rd.; Berrall-Jasper Fence Co., 1201 Brentwood rd.; Sinclair Oil Station, 915 Rhode Island ave.; United Petroleum Products, 710 Rhode Island ave., and Gulf Service Station, 720 Rhode Island ave.

At the Truck Service Co., 1065 Brentwood rd., the burglars obtained $12 worth of clothing, and at a Texaco station, 100 New York ave. ne., they got $17.50 from a safe and $5 from a pinball machine.

Transit Firm Loses Fight On Transfers

Supreme Court Denies Rehearing; Pentagon Rate Reduction Due

Lower bus fares for Capital Transit Co. riders who go to the Pentagon and other Virginia installations will go into effect probably by the end of the week as a result of a Supreme Court ruling yesterday.

The high court refused the transit firm's request for a rehearing on the fare case it decided on November 14. Once the legal papers involved are signed, the lower fare will begin. Lawyers estimated that would take only a few days.

The fares will be $1.92 for a book of 12 tickets or 16 cents each, compared to the present 23 cents. Thus a rider will save 70 cents on five round trips a week.

The court decision has the effect of reinstating the lower fares, at least until Capital Transit can go to the Interstate Commerce Commission, as it is expected to do, and ask for higher fares on the joint-ride tickets. But it is likely to take until spring to obtain an ICC ruling.

Passengers who have saved the 6-cent and 3-cent receipts issued during the long court fight may have them redeemed shortly. Capital Transit had no statement last night but said it would make an announcement once the legal papers are signed.

If all the outstanding tickets are turned in it will cost the transit line about $2500.

The joint fare issue revolved around the division of fares, and who has the right to set them, for riders who transfer from Capital Transit lines to either the Washington, Virginia & Maryland Coach Co. or the Alexandra, Barcroft & Washington Transit Co.

Fairfax Bucks At Abolishing School Boards

F. W. Robinson, Fairfax County school board chairman, yesterday took issue with the proposal of Virginia State Senator Harry W. Byrd, jr., to abolish school boards in most of the State's 100 counties.

Robinson asserted Byrd's proposal, which the latter announced Sunday he will introduce in the General Assembly, "is absolutely no good for our county."

According to Byrd, the bill will transfer school board functions and powers to boards of supervisors in all counties where school boards are chosen by school trustees named by circuit judges.

Both Robinson and G. Wallace Carper, chairman of the Fairfax County board of supervisors, said the county heads would have to work full time if they were to take over operation of schools. As it is, both bodies now meet much oftener than their two regularly scheduled monthly meetings.

Robinson said Fairfax County's school problems require special attention. "It might work for other counties," he said, "but it's absolutely no good for our county." He added he had no objection to having the school board appointed by the supervisors.

Dr. Orton to Speak

Dr. Dwayne Orton, education director of International Business Machines Corp., will discuss "What About the Human in Human Relations" tonight at 7:30 o'clock in the National Archives Auditorium, 7th st. and Pennsylvania ave. nw. He will address the Career Incentives Section of the Society for Personnel Administration.

Federal Supply Service, General Services Administration, whose topic will be "Federal Specifications and Commodity Specifications."

Over Bondsman

D. C. Judges Lose Case in High Court

The Supreme Court yesterday sustained an Appeals Court rebuke to the District Court for revoking a local bondsman's license without "due process of law."

The high court did so by refusing to consider an appeal by the District judges.

The bondsman is John W. Carter, proprietor of a restaurant at 1228 U st. nw. He first was granted a bonding authorization, then it was revoked. The Appeals Court said the revocation came six months after a hearing "and without further ado."

In its decision, the Court of Appeals said the lower court, in the person of Judge David A. Pine, acted without "the elements of due process of law, i. e., a hearing and revelation of all data upon which a decision is to be based."

Carter had stated in his application that he had not been charged and/or convicted of "any offense involving moral turpitude." Later it was determined he had been charged with three gambling law violations and once with receiving stolen property. The District Court later received but did not disclose an FBI report in the case.

Carter's license—the one revoked—has expired during the appeals and he now has pending a new application. Judge Alexander Holtzoff, before whom the application is pending, has not indicated when he will act on it.

350,000 Cars Jam District Streets Daily

About half the persons employed in Washington drive to work and this number is steadily rising, creating ever-larger headaches of congestion and parking, Traffic Director George E. Keneipp said yesterday.

Each day about 350,000 cars are driven to work, many by the city's "daylight citizens" from nearby Maryland and Virginia, and this trend is growing, Keneipp said.

Speaking to the Junior Chamber of Commerce traffic and safety committee at the Burlington Hotel, the official revealed figures showing the vehicular traffic has been growing by leaps and bounds, slowing movement to much stop-and-go driving.

He said weekday traffic rose 11½ percent in September over the 1948 average and the 1948 figure was 13½ percent over the previous peak in 1941.

He then gave some figures of specific traffic jammers. A spot check of the 14th st. bridge showed it was carrying 69,145 cars a day. Another pinpointed the intersection of 15th and H sts. nw. as the worst in the city from an accident standpoint.

The corner of 14th st. and Constitution ave. has become the busiest intersection in town with 4234 cars an hour moving across it. Independence ave. and 14th st. sw. was second with 3994 cars an hour. Previously 17th st. and Constitutional ave. nw. led the list.

In pedestrian traffic, the intersection of Pennsylvania ave. and 12th st. nw. leads the city with 4299 crossing it each hour.

Keneipp disclosed the figures in outlining traffic problems before the committee which has offered him its aid. The session will resume January 9 when the traffic director will outline how the group can help.

Christmas Forum To Be Held Tonight

A Christmas forum sponsored by the Share the Faith Department, Catholic Daughters of America, will be held at 8:15 p. m. today at No. 2 Scott Circle, nw.

Subject is "Good Tidings of Great Joy." Participants will be the Rev. A. J. Burggraff, C. S. P., director of the Paulist Information Center of New York City, and the Rev. Alvin R. Burggraff, C. S. P., assistant director of the Paulist Juniorate, Baltimore, Md.

Coroner's Jury Holds Woman in Double Killing

Two persons were held for the grand jury yesterday by a coroner's jury, one in connection with a double murder, the other in a fatal abortion.

Hazel Cunningham, 25, of 1008 New Jersey ave. nw., was held in the death Saturday of Melvin Morrow, 23, and his wife, Katherine, 24, in their room at 1216 U st. nw. Police said they were shot during an argument after a card game.

Mildred Jeanette Agee, 46, of 1316 5th st. se. was held for the grand jury on a charge of performing an abortion on Mrs. Lillian Williams, 26, of 1314 11th st. se. on November 30. Mrs. Williams died Friday in Gallinger Hospital.

GWU Adds J. U. Stein To 'Who's Who' Listing

George Washington University yesterday added the name of Julian U. Stein, president of the senior class, to the list of students chosen to represent the school in the 1949-50 edition of "Who's Who in American Universities and Colleges."

His name inadvertently was left off the university's list published in The Washington Post yesterday. Stein, who lives at 4601 Ellicott st. nw., is inter-fraternity council treasurer and athletic director of the Student Council.

Legion Meeting Thursday

Members of the Legion of Valor will meet at 8:30 p. m. Thursday at Admiral Robert E. Peary Ship, No. 427, VFW, 1300 New Hampshire ave. nw.

Restaurant Seized for Back Taxes

Tenth St. Property To Be Auctioned Unless $8305 Payment Is Made

The District yesterday put a padlock on Jimmie's Restaurant, Inc., 409 10th st. nw., and gave the firm 10 days to pay back taxes of $8305.

Collector of Taxes Guy W. Pearson said contents of the restaurant were seized for failure to meet personal property taxes, corporation franchise assessments and jeopardy assessments.

The property will be sold at public auction if the tax bills are not paid, Pearson said.

The restaurant twice before has run afoul of the District government.

In February 1948 the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board suspended its liquor license for 60 days after finding the restaurant guilty of permitting gambling on the premises. The Commissioners, reviewing the restaurant's appeal, upheld the ABC Board findings but reduced the suspension to 30 days.

In May of 1948 the restaurant was fined $100 for violating health regulations.

The Rev. Clarence W. Cranford, of Calvary Baptist Church, will speak.

In Wife's Death

Trial Set For Today in Holober Case

Trial of Charles F. Holober on charges of shooting his wife to death and burying his infant daughter alive beside her is scheduled to begin at 10 a. m. today in Fairfax County Court.

Holober

T. Brooke Howard will defend the 40-year-old Washington man on the two murder counts. Holober has pleaded innocent.

Holober was pronounced sane by authorities at the Southwestern State Hospital at Marion, Va., last September after being under observation at the institution for about six months.

Holober, former jewelry clerk, who lived at 1216 Shepherd st. nw., was arrested in Washington last February 28, a day after the discovery of the bodies of his wife, Mrs. Frances Garner Holober, 37, and their 8-months-old daughter, June, in a shallow grave near a Fairfax County nudist camp.

After the discovery of the bodies, Holober admitted both crimes to Washington police, and waived extradition to Fairfax County, where he signed a confession.

The couple was married on December 22, 1947 but Holober said they had not lived together after the marriage, although he visited his wife each week.

Mrs. Holober lived with her parents at 931 New York ave. nw.

Man Robbed Twice of His $2500 Notes

The angriest man in town yesterday morning was Russell R. Thompson, 62, of 1305 S st. nw, chief oysterman at Harvey's Restaurant, 1107 Connecticut ave. nw.

On October 29 someone ransacked his room and took his life savings, $5900 in cash and $2500 in postal savings certificates. He obtained duplicates for the latter.

Yesterday morning, as he parked his car near his home, three men held him up and robbed him of $4 in cash—and the $2500 in duplicate savings certificates. Police Pvt. Thomas F. Walker pursued the men, but lost them in an alley.

Two things made Thompson angrier: He is an expert skeet shot, but was unarmed. One of his regular customers is FBI Chief J. Edgar Hoover, but Hoover wasn't around.

Energetic Cab 'Snatcher' Sought in 2 Holdups

Police yesterday sought an energetic young man they would like to charge with operating the Shuttle Taxicab Robbery Service, Inc.

They said Richard Carnahan, 26, of 6307 60th ave., Riverdale, picked up the young man at 11:15 p. m., Sunday at Georgia ave., and Colesville rd., Silver Spring. At Western ave., and Rittenhouse st. nw., police said, the man robbed Carnahan of $4 and fled in his cab. It was found abandoned in the rear of the 4600 block of Wisconsin ave.

Just before the cab was found, police said, the same young man entered the cab of Mark A. Drummond, 30, of 5614 Kansas ave. nw., in the 4600 block of Wisconsin ave., and ordered him to drive to Four Corners, Silver Spring.

Before reaching there, police said, the passenger robbed Drummond of his cab and $10. The cab was found abandoned in the 4100 block of Chesapeake st. nw., not far from the site of the first abandoned cab.

The shuttle bandit was about 25, police said, with a crew haircut, and a brown topcoat.

Hagerstown Firm 1 of 4 Indicted In Justice Suit

The Jamison Cold Storage Door Co. of Hagerstown, Md., was one of four companies in the cold storage door industry charged with price-fixing by a Federal grand jury in Cleveland, Ohio, yesterday.

The indictment, according to a Department of Justice statement, charges the Hagerstown firm and three others with conspiring to fix prices on cold storage doors. The firms manufacture 80 percent of the total national production, the statement said.

Two officials of the Hagerstown firm, J. V. Jamison, jr., board chairman, J. V. Jamison 3d, president, also were cited. The other defendants are the National Refrigerator Co., St. Louis, Mo.; Streator Product Corp., Fairfield, Iowa; York Corp. of York, Pa.

Aid to the Forgetful

New York, Dec. 12 (U.P.).—New York City motorists who leave ignition keys in their unwatched cars for more than three minutes are liable to be fined $5 or imprisoned two days, effective today. The new law is aimed at reducing car thefts.

Husband's 20-Year Silence Is Not Cruelty, So No Grounds for Divorce, Court Rules

A man's 20-year silence may be hard on his wife, but it doesn't entitle her to a divorce, the United States Court of Appeals ruled yesterday.

The decision reversed a limited divorce decree given Mrs. Kathryn L. Moore, 65, of 1460 Irving st. nw.

She charged that between 1927 and 1946, her husband, Harry B. Moore, sr., 58, of 1474 Columbia rd. nw., never held a "mutual conversation" with her and that it was rare he ever said a word to her.

Appeals Court Judge James M. Proctor said:

"The courts of this jurisdiction have held consistently that, under its laws where there is no physical violence, a divorce for cruelty will not lie unless the mistreatment has caused injury to the health of the complaining spouse.

"In the present case there was no physical violence or abuse, and no evidence that the wife's health had suffered by reason of the husband's mistreatment or neglect. In these circumstances, it is clear that the charge of cruelty was not proved."

The Moores married in 1913 and had three children.

"For the first 10 years my marriage was a very happy one,' Mrs. Moore said. "No one could ask for a better one."

Finally, in 1927, Moore announced he "didn't want the responsibility of a family any more," the wife charged. Moore said they parted voluntarily and agreed they were "grossly incompatible."

The Moores for a five-year period lived under the same roof but not as man and wife, the pleadings stated.

In 1946, when she filed her suit for a legal separation, she cited the prolonged silence and added Moore never expressed an interest in her wellbeing nor would he support her and the children.

Moore denied all this and asked for an absolute divorce based on more than five years voluntary separation. She countered that he had an "illicit" association with a woman who roomed in his apartment. To this Moore said he knew the woman socially but never intimately.

Judge Matthew McGuire granted the original decree and $100 monthly alimony, based on a general cruelty count.

Job Fraud Charged To Ex-ECA Official

A Washington man talked himself into a $12,000-a-year job with the Economic Cooperation Administration by posing as the right-hand man of a railroad president although he had actually been an extra signalman, the Government charged yesterday.

The man, James E. Glynn, 59, of the General Scott Apartments, was indicted on eight counts of false statement to the Government in various applications for Federal jobs dating back to 1945.

As the result of his impressive-appearing application, in which he stated he had been adminstrative assistant to the president of the New York Central Railroad and had once supervised an engineering study group for General Motors, Glynn was appointed an ECA foreign service officer and stationed in Athens, Greece, in November, 1948.

His Employment Ended

Glynn's salary was $12,000 yearly, and, the Government said, he had collected $3600 in pay from November 29, 1948, when he was appointed, until March, 1949 when his employment was ended.

In his application, the indictment charged, Glynn said he had been employed by General Motors from 1921 to 1924 and "had visited England and the Continent supervising a group of 30 engineers studying all types of transportation . . . knowing you had not visited England in the course of your employment for said company and had never supervised 30 engineers . . ."

The indictment also charged that in 1945 in an application for a job with the Office of Inter-American Affairs, Glynn falsely stated he had attended Stevens Institute of Technology, Hoboken, N. J., and Brown University.

Glynn said yesterday he had been employed in the transportation division of the Commerce Department prior to getting the ECA job. He said he is unemployed at present. He is married and has no children.

Other Indictments

In other indictments Earl D. Holloman, 35, whose current address was given as Lorton Reformatory, was charged with four counts of robbery in the holdup of as many Washington merchants. A total of about $600 was taken. In two of the holdups Holloman was aided by an accomplice, according to police.

Camnish Cusato, 34, of 1909 19th st. nw., was indicted on a total of nine counts covering promotion of a numbers game, selling numbers slips and accepting horse race bets. Cusato was arrested by a police undercover man who said he bought numbers slips from Cusato at a newsstand at 1926 Pennsylvania ave. nw.

Peter Dermurigan, 4718 14th st. nw., was indicted on four counts of promoting a lottery and accepting numbers bets.

Dice Table Setup Charged

James Lucas, 42, of 1808 6th st. nw., was indicted on charges of setting up a dice table.

Albert G. Brown, 31, of 5 Elmira st. se., was charged with stealing a $300 camera from his brother, James J. Brown. The camera was later recovered from a second-hand store.

A postal clerk, Richard B. McGuire, 29, of 4042 Fessenden st. nw., was charged with embezzling $16.90 from a sealed letter in the postoffice at Massachusetts ave. and North Capitol st., September 27.

A total of 41 indictments were returned. Charges in six other cases were ignored. Among those ignored was a charge of sex law violation against John F. Sharley, 67, a carnival employe of Columbia, S. C., who had been accused of molesting an 11-year-old girl.

Ground-Breaking

Miss Pinza To Sing at Sesqui Fete

Miss Claudia Pinza, daughter of Ezio Pinza, will sing three numbers at the ground-breaking ceremony for the Sesquicentennial amphitheater in Rock Creek Park Saturday at 10:30 a. m.

Miss Pinza, Metropolitan Opera Company soprano, will sing "Some Enchanted Evening" from the show "South Pacific" in which her father is starring. She will be accompanied by the 126-member Army band and chorus.

Joseph C. McGarraghy, chairman of the executive committee of the National Capital Sesquicentennial Commission, will be the master of ceremonies and Secretary of Interior Oscar Chapman will turn the first spadeful for the amphitheater.

Meanwhile, officials of the Public Housing Adiminstration met yesterday with the National Capital Housing Authority to discuss relocation of 61 temporary housing units now on a site earmarked for the Sesquicentennial Freedom Fair.

Harold Fliege, director of management operations for the War Emergency Housing Division, PHA, said the cost of relocation has been sliced from $500,000 to about $100,000, of which the major part would be for preparation of the new site. One has been suggested near Foote st. ne., not far from the present location.

But finding funds to make the move is still the principal problem. Fliege said PHA legal staffers are exploring sources of such funds.

FCC Officials Seek First-Hand Experience

By The Associated Press

Two Federal Communications Commissioners are going to get some first-hand experience in the radio-telephone service for which they help make the rules.

George E. Sterling and Edward M. Webster yesterday asked the FCC to allow them to put radio telephones in their cars, to talk to the American Radio Telephone Service here in Washington, receive messages and listen to other subscribers. They explained they wanted experience in how the service works.

Dodge Hotel Union Workers Ask Mediation

The AFL Hotel and Restaurant Employes Alliance has asked the Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service to mediate in a contract dispute with the Dodge Hotel, Charles Levine, union attorney, said yesterday.

The hotel's union service and food employes, who number about 95, have voted to authorize a strike, if necessary, to obtain the work contract they have asked for.

The contract would be the first between the hotel and the union, which won recognition in October as bargaining agent.

The union is asking for the same type of contract it has with similar hotels here, Levine said, which would include higher wages and some other changes in working conditions.

AFL Oyster Shuckers Close 10 Packing Plants

Grasonville, Md., Dec. 12 (AP).—A strike of between 280 and 300 AFL oyster shuckers closed down 10 seafood packing houses around Kent Island today.

A union leader said the strikers are trying to force the companies to sign a work contract paying 85 cents a gallon for shucking oysters. Glen Snyder, union business agent, said the operators already are paying 85 cents and have said they do not object to other provisions in the proposed contract. But they refused to sign it, he reported.

The strike shut down all but five oyster houses in the Kent Narrows-Little Creek area.

Mad Bandit Captured in Hyattsville

An escaped lunatic, wanted by Baltimore police in a series of armed holdups, was captured on a bus in Hyattsville last night.

The man, who admitted he is the much-sought Joseph Frank Kohnen, 29, was carrying a toy gun when arrested. He offered no resistance.

The tip came from an alert Trailways bus terminal ticket agent who recognized the fugitive from his description furnished earlier in the day by police here.

Baltimore police, who had described him as armed and dangerous, said he escaped last month from the Spring Grove Mental Hospital, a State institution at Catonsville, Md. He was committed in February, 1948, after being caught holding up a Baltimore jewelry store.

Baltimore has had a wave of 31 holdups this month and 91 since November 1. In at least three of them, the bandit used a note-passing technique. One note, to a druggist victim, read:

"Don't Say a Word"

"If the cops come, don't say a word or I'll blow your head off and the cops' heads off too."

Baltimore police obtained a warrant for Kohnen charging him with that robbery. They said two theaters were robbed in the same way. So anxious were they to get Kohnen that they broadcast an appeal to the public for help, warning that' he was probably armed and dangerous.

On a tip from Washington police that Kohnen was aboard Trailways Bus 813 bound for Baltimore, Maryland State troopers and Prince Georges County police converged on Baltimore blvd. last night.

They stopped the bus at 5:30 p. m., at Melrose Crossing and Rhode Island ave., in Hyattsville.

Detective Richard A. Pearson, Corpl. Elmer Pumphrey and Pvts. James Burgess and William Little of Prince Georges County police boarded the vehicle. They walked to the back, recognized Kohnen from the "wanted" pictures and took him into custody. He readily admitted his identity, police said.

The ticket agent was George T. Hooker, 35, of 1531 New Hampshire ave. nw., who had been supplied a complete description of Kohnen earlier in the day through Samuel A. Wampler, 35, of 1300 Taylor st. nw., terminal manager.

Hooker said Kohnen bought a Baltimore ticket about 4:40 p. m., went to a barber shop to be shaved, and caught the 5 p. m. bus. He notified Wampler, who looked at Kohnen when he boarded the bus, then notified police. By the time they arrived, the bus had left, and the warning was radioed to Prince Georges County and Maryland State police.

Jr. Growers, Minus One, See Our Town

Rigors of big city life proved too much for even a rugged Minnesota lad yesterday, one of the 400 junior vegetable growers here from 46 States for a four-day convention.

Richard R. Angus, 19, of Farmington, Minn., was ordered to bed with a cold infection. To cheer him up his farm friends presented him with:

A bouquet of lettuce, carrots, parsley and cabbage.

The youths, members of the National Junior Vegetable Growers' Association, in their fifteenth annual convention here, yesterday visited the Agriculture Department experimental station at Beltsville, Md., toured the Naval Academy, were received by Gov. Preston Lane, then enjoyed the square dancing last night at Maryland University with the Collegiate 4-H Club chapter as host.

Today they'll do extensive sightseeing. Wednesday they will give demonstrations at convention headquarters, the Washington Hotel, of how to produce, market, process and prepare vegetables. Thursday the national grading and identification contests will be judged and awards totaling $10,000 in scholarships, trips and cash prizes will be announced.

Berryman Funeral Set For Today

Clifford Kennedy Berryman, friend of Presidents and cartoonist extraordinary of the Nation's political life, will be laid to rest today.

Funeral services for the 80-year-old originator of the Teddy Bear will be held at 11 a.m. today at Washington Heights Presbyterian Church, 1862 Kalorama rd. nw. The Rev. Robert E. Sherrill, pastor of the church Mr. Berryman helped build, will officiate.

Burial will be in Glenwood Cemetery.

Mr. Berryman died Sunday morning at his home, 2114 Bancroft pl. nw. He had been ill since November 17, when he collapsed in the lobby of the Star building as he went to work.

Truman Sends Condolences

Messages of sympathy from friends and the Nation's leaders, many of whom had been lampooned in his gently forceful style, included this telegram from President Truman to Mrs. Berryman:

"A superb artist, whose talent had been a national asset for more than half a century, is lost to his far-flung public in the death of your devoted husband.

"He was a valued friend and I hasten to assure you that I share the sorrow which has been laid so heavily on you. To you and to all who mourn with you, I offer this assurance of heartfelt sympathy."

Pallbearers for the Pulitzer Prize winner will be Robert Lincoln O'Brien, Dr. Gilbert Grosvenor, Walker S. Buel, the Rev. James Shera Montgomery, S. H. Kauffmann, B. M. McKelway, Richard L. Wilson, Thomas L. Stokes, Corcoran Thom, Lloyd Wilson, Carroll Glover, Henry Spencer, Louis Hillyer, Joseph H. Himes, H. L. Rust and John Russell Young.

Press Club Delegation

The delegation from the National Press Club, one of Mr. Berryman's many affiliations, includes James J. Butler, George W. Combs, Theodore F. Koop, Peter Edson, H. B. Elliston, Truman T. Felt, Robert S. Allen, Warren B. Francis, Bulkley Griffin, Frank A. Hall, Martin S. Hayden, Harold B. Hinton, David Lawrence, Sir Willmott Lewis, Lorenzo Martin, Radford E. Mobley, J. Lacey Reynolds and Gerald A. Robichaud.

The delegation from the Columbia Historical Society, of which Mr. Berryman was a life member, will be: Arthur P. Drury, H. Paul Caemerer, Parke P. Jones, George R. Linkins, Frederick S. Tyler, John E. Allen, Bruce Baird, George Kennedy, Mrs. Joseph F. Batterly, Maj. Gen. U. S. Grant 3d, Lewis Wood, Albert W. Fox, James Waldo Fawcett, Mr. McKelway and Mr. Glover.

Mr. Berryman was a vice president of the Association of Oldest Inhabitants, and the delegation from this association includes John Clagett Proctor, Fred A. Emery, Walter E. Allen, Jesse C. Suter, Charles H. Bates, Ernest W. Brown, William D. Searle, A. J. Driscoll, Evan H. Tucker, Orrin J. Davy, Herbert P. Leeman, William E. Leahy, Commissioner Young, Mr. Thom.

To honor him, the Corcoran Art Gallery will place its collection of Berryman cartoons on exhibit beginning today and continuing through December.

Funeral services for Allen R. Harrison, 69, retired Government accountant and ordained Presbyterian minister, will be held at 8 p. m. today at Chambers funeral home, 5801 Cleveland ave., Riverdale, Md. Burial will be in Charlotte, N. C.

Ill for two months, Mr. Harrison died Sunday at his home, 6219 58th ave., East Riverdale.

Eleven years ago, Mr. Harrison joined the Federal Works Agency as an accountant. He later transferred to the Maritime Commission and was retired in 1946.

A native of Huntersville, N. C., Mr. Harrison graduated from Davidson College, Davidson, N. C., and subsequently taught school in his home State for several years.

Later he was graduated from the Theological Seminary of Richmond, Va., ordained a Presbyterian minister, and preached for a time in North Carolina's Mecklenburg County.

He is survived by two daughters, Mrs. Ann L. Bergen, of the East Riverdale address and Mrs. Mary L. Chovan, 3220 12th st. ne.; and two sons, Allen R. Harrison, jr., Chicago, and Charles W. Harrison of Anchorage, Alaska.

Mrs. Alice R. Printz

Funeral services for Mrs. Alice R. Printz, 82, a Washington resident for 50 years, will be held at 2 p. m. Wednesday in the Lee funeral home, 4th st. and Massachusetts ave. ne.

Mrs. Printz, who had been a seamstress at Jelleff's for a number of years until her retirement 10 years ago, died after a year's illness Sunday at her home, 423 K st. ne.

A native of Page County, Va., Mrs. Printz is survived by her niece, Mrs. Paul Miller, with whom she lived; three sisters, Miss Mary Kemp, of the K st. address; Mrs. John Burner, Front Royal, Va., and Mrs. Thomas Perry, Atlantic City, N. J., and a brother, Franklin Kemp, Front Royal.

Charles A. Webb

Asheville, N. C., Dec. 12 (AP).—Charles A. Webb, chairman of the board of the Asheville Citizen and Times newspapers, died here yesterday. He was 83.

Mr. Webb entered a hospital last August with virus pneumonia and had been ill since then.

He served three terms in the North Carolina State Senate and was chairman of the State Democratic Executive Committee in 1912.

He was a member of the board of directors of the American Newspaper Publishers Association for 10 years.

Mr. Webb's efforts figured heavily in establishment of the Great Smoky Mountains National Park.

Esther Shop Bonus

All employes of the Esther Shop, 1225 F st. nw., with three months or more service will receive Christmas bonuses, the amount depending on how long they have been with the firm, S. R. Dweck, owner, announced yesterday.

'Thrill Crazy' Youth Hunted in Clay Slaying

Prince Georges County police last night were seeking a "thrill-crazy" youth who "wouldn't be taken by police as long as he had a gun," as the latest suspect in the robbery-slaying of Winston C. Clay, jr., 18, Berwyn, Md., gas-station attendant last Tuesday.

Police said they were questioning the informant in an attempt to find the youth.

Police yesterday stopped more than 1500 southbound cars on the Washington-Baltimore blvd. in front of the station where Clay was shot. Drivers were asked about any activity they might have seen at the gas-station as they passed at other times. Police said they had uncovered several leads. They will query northbound drivers today.

Art and Sculpture Show

The work of 22 Washington artists and sculptors is being shown in a pre-Christmas art exhibit and sale in the Playhouse Theater art gallery, 727 15th st. nw.

Funeral arrangements have not been completed.

Food Rushed To Starving Shallmar, Md.

Shallmar, Md., Dec. 12 (AP).—Christmas has come early to this destitute coal mine town.

There were hot lunches today for the 50 pupils at the elementary school.

Two trucks distributed milk, eggs, fruit and fresh vegetables to the 50 shacks where most of Shallmar's 200 people have been on the edge of starvation for weeks.

But Wolf Den coal mine, the hamlet's only industry, still was shut down, as it has been since last March 31. The owner has hopes of reopening it, but no immediate prospects.

Relief supplies came in by the truckload today from neighboring communities in western Maryland and nearby West Virginia. There were shipments from Cumberland, Md., 50 miles northeast of here, from Frostburg, Midland and Westernport, Md., and from Piedmont, W. Va.

The trucks dumped their clothing and groceries at the three-room schoolhouse. Principal J. Paul Andrick and Albert Males, chairman of the United Mine Workers' local relief committee, supervised distribution.

Andrick estimated there is enough on hand so the gaunt coal miners and their families will have square meals for two or three weeks now.

The fresh milk, the eggs, the vegetables were the first some of the families have seen in months, since about the first of October, when their unemployment compensation benefits ran out.

The problem grew acute last week when a girl collapsed at school. Andrick's investigation showed she and her family had only apples to eat for a couple of weeks.

The Wolf Den mine shut down last March for lack of orders. It had been operating only part time, two or three days a week, for nine months before that.

Many mines in the region are "marginal" producers. They are so small, so difficult to work, or mine such inferior veins that they can operate only when there is a heavy demand for coal.

E. W. Fairchild Dies; Business Paper Founder

Glen Ridge, N. J., Dec. 12 (AP).—E. W. Fairchild, 83, founder and president of the Fairchild Publications, business newspapers, died today at his home.

He first became acquainted with the trade publishing field in Chicago in 1890. While selling soaps and yeast cakes to grocery stores and gathering news for a grocery trade paper, he was offered an interest in the Chicago Herald Gazette.

Later Mr. Fairchild bought out the former owner and published the magazine as the Chicago Apparel Gazette. It was the oldest of the Fairchild trade papers, and now is consolidated into Men's Wear magazine.

Joined by his brother, L. E. Fairchild, he published mimeographed sheets of news of the Chicago clothing trade for industry visitors at the 1892 Chicago World's Fair. This became the Daily Trade Record, now known as the Daily News Record.

Mr. Fairchild was born in Flushing, N. Y., May 5, 1866. Survivors include three children, Elizabeth, wife of Harry T. Martindale, jr., and Edmund W. and Louis W., both associated in the business established by their father.

Mrs. Dulany, Widow of D. C. Banker, Dies

Mrs. Anne Carter Dulany, widow of H. Rozier Dulany, sr., and member of a prominent Virginia family, died Sunday at her home, 2230 California st. nw.

Mrs. Dulany, who suffered from heart disease, had been an invalid for some time. She was 86.

Born in King William County, Virginia, Mrs. Dulany was married from the Governor's Mansion in Richmond in 1888 while her cousin, Fitzhugh Lee, was Governor. The couple celebrated their golden wedding anniversary in 1938. Mr. Dulany, who was chairman of the board of finance of Riggs National Bank, died in 1940.

Mrs. Dulany was the daughter of Thomas H. and Susan Roy Carter. Her father was a colonel in the Confederate Army and served as chief of artillery for the Army of Northern Virginia.

Mrs. Dulany was a member of the Colonial Dames and a charter member of the Fauquier-Loudoun Garden Club, first Virginia unit of that organization.

Funeral services will be held today at 2 p. m. at Trinity Church in Upperville, Va. Interment will be private, in the family graveyard at Oakley, Va.

Mrs. Dulany is survived by three grandchildren, Mrs. Juliet D. Roby, Miss Anne Willing Dulany and Benjamin W. Dulany.

Lester B. Shelly

Virginia Beach, Va., Dec. 12 (AP).—Lester Benjamin Shelly, 40, president of the Virginia Beach Chamber of Commerce and owner of the Shelly Music & Appliance Co., died at his home here this afternoon of coronary thrombosis.

Mr. Shelly was born in Oregon, Ill., and had been a resident of Virginia Beach since 1930. He attended Culver Military Academy and William and Mary College.

Gen. Marshall Honored at Party

By Marie McNair

GEN. GEORGE C. MARSHALL is a target for titles. He was Chief of Staff during the war, Secretary of State after that. Now he's president of the American National Red Cross, and as such, was guest of honor at a reception yesterday given by the board of directors of the Red Cross District of Columbia chapter.

It takes a lot of people to fill a floor at the Corcoran Art Gallery where yesterday's party was held. Yet Statuary Hall at the gallery was comfortably full with most guests clustering around the three tea tables set up in U shape against a background of massive pieces of sculpture.

At the other end of the hall Clifford Folger, chairman of the District Red Cross chapter, and Mrs. Folger, headed the receiving line. Mrs. Marshall, wearing a black frock with white orchids pinned to her shoulder and green velvet hat, stood with her distinguished husband. Also in line to greet the guests were Daniel W. Bell, general fund chairman for the 1950 Washington area Red Cross campaign, Mrs. Bell and Miss Elizabeth Houghton, chairman of Home Service for the District Red Cross who wore black frock and hat, and Mrs. David Finley, chairman of Volunteer Services, in black. Mrs. Bell wore black with silver sparkling at the neckline. Mrs. Folger's trim silk suit was taupe color and she topped it with a small felt hat of rosy-beige.

Most of those present yesterday were members of the board of directors, chairman and vice chairman and a group of volunteer workers.

Take Turns at Tea Table

WOMEN active in the District Red Cross took their turn at the tea table. I saw Mrs. A. S. J. Atkinson, chairman of the Gray Lady service; and Mrs. Morris Cafritz, who was 1949 chairman of the Diplomatic and Booth Committee for the fund drive, looking her smartest in plain black with tiny velvet horns at the sides of her black velvet calot. Mrs. Edward W. Fay, member of the board, and Mrs. James L. Houghteling, who holds the same title, were also serving. Others at the table were Mrs. Herbert Dudley, Mrs. H. O. McTague, Mrs. Helen Kemmerer, Mrs. K. Hilding Beij, Mrs. Bruce Roberts, Mrs. John S. Snyder, Mrs. Ernest Markwalter, Mrs. L. H. Pentz, Miss Dorothy Bovee, Mrs. Olaf Solem, Miss Lillian Adams, Mrs. Jerry Greene, Miss Eulene Hawkins and Mrs. Ernest H. Edinger.

Veteran Workers on Hand

MRS. CHARLES DEWEY, and Mrs. Eldridge Jordan, who have worked longer and harder for the Red Cross than any two women I know, were both there yesterday.

Mrs. Jordan's record—if memory serves—covers something like 30 years, beginning with World War I when she took cigarettes out to the boys at Walter Reed, and continuing as a Gray Lady.

Mrs. Matthew Grant Jones—she was Gertrude Lamont—was there and I saw Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Morris, Mrs. Edward R. Finkenstaedt, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Bartlett, Mrs. David St. Pierre Gaillard, Joseph C. Grew, former Ambassador to Japan, Gen. Philip Fleming, and Mrs. Fleming and Mr. and Mrs. Joe Hume Gardner.

Ambassador and Lady Franks Entertain

THE BRITISH Ambassador and Lady Franks were the guests in whose honor former Ambassador and Mrs. Joseph Davies were hosts at dinner last evening at Tregaron, their estate on Klingle rd.

Following dinner there was entertainment by Dwight Fiske, who sings to his own piano accompaniment. Mrs. Davies will entertain at luncheon on Friday, December 23.

Millers Honored

THE Bolivian Ambassador and Senora de Martinez Vargas were hosts at dinner last evening at the Carlton Hotel in honor of Edward G. Miller, jr., Assistant Secretary of State, and Mrs. Miller.

Also seated around the flower-decked table were Assistant Secretary of State and Mrs. Willard Thorp; Assistant Secretary of the Treasury and Mrs. William McChesney Martin; the Uruguayan Ambassador and Senora de Dominguez-Campora; the Brazilian Ambassador, Mauricio Nabuco and his sister, Miss Carolina Nabuco; the Colombian Ambassador and Senora de Zuleta-Angel; the Ambassador of Ecuador and Senora de Dillon; Luis Quintanilla, Mexican Ambassador to the OAS; Guillermo Gutierrez Vea Murguia, Bolovian Ambassador to the OAS, and Senora de Gutierrez Vea Murguia; Jose Mora, Uruguay envoy to OAS, and Senora de Mora; Paul C. Daniels, U. S. Ambassador to OAS, and Mrs. Daniels.

Swedish Ambassador Dinner Host

THE SWEDISH Ambassador and Mme. Boheman were hosts at a farewell dinner last evening at the embassy for the First Secretary of the Swedish Embassy and Mme. Rydbeck, to leave soon for Mr. Rydbeck's new post at Bonne, Germany.

Among the 20 guests were members of the State Department and the Swedish, Norwegian and Danish Embassies.

Danish Admiral Says 'Goodby'

REAR ADMIRAL Frits Aage Kjoelsen, Naval Attache of the Danish Embassy, is about to say farewell to friends made during his four years stay here, and will leave on Thursday for Copenhagen. Mme. Kjoelsen returned to Denmark last summer.

Admiral Kjoelsen entertained at a stag cocktail party yesterday at the Army and Navy Club to say goodby. Naval Attaches of the Scandinavian countries were all present as well as others from the Atlantic Pact countries. Among those in the group were Sir Frederick Dalrymple-Hamilton, R. N.; Rear Admiral Brian Schofield, R. N.; Admiral F. L. Johnson, USN; Vice Admiral Arthur D. Strubel, USN; Capt. Floyd Ferris, USN.

Admiral Kjoelsen will be succeeded by Admiral E. Quistgaard.

Miss Pamela Macy Engaged

Announcement has been made of the engagement of Miss Pamela Joan Ridgway Macy, daughter of T. Ridgway Macy of Washington, and the late Mrs. Louise Pugh Macy of Charlottesville, Va., to Alexander von Thelen of Charlottesville, son of Mrs. Alexander Julius von Thelen of Charlottesville, and the late Mr. von Thelen of Vienna, Austria.

Miss Macy is a niece of Representative W. Kingsland Macy of New York. She is a sister of Henry Ridgway Macy and T. Ridgway Macy, jr., of Oyster Bay, Long Island; of Miss Natica Macy of New York and Lady Haggerston of Ellingham Hall, Chathill, England. She is a half-sister of Miss Sonja Ridgway Macy and Anthony Wayne Ridgeway Macy of Washington.

Mr. von Thelen is a graduate of the University of Virginia and the university's law school and served with the lend-lease administration and Military Intelligence of the Seventh Army during the war. He is with the banking firm of W. E. Buford & Co.

Honor Guest at Mayflower

Mrs. Walter R. Scott, who returned last spring to her home in San Francisco after a number of years residence in Hongkong, was an honor guest at yesterday's weekly fashion show in The Mayflower Lounge. Mrs. Scott, who spent the summer traveling in Europe, is the house guest of Mr. and Mrs. Eric Grimble, formerly of Hongkong.

Reception to Honor BIS Chief

Paul H. Gore-Booth, director of the British Information Service in the United States, will be guest of honor at a reception on Wednesday given by the English Speaking Union's Washington Branch at the United Nations Club. The reception will be held at 4:30 p. m. after which Mr. Gore-Booth will give an informal address to the members. His subject will be "Coming Back to Washington."

Mr. Gore-Booth was formerly head of the European Recovery Department of the British Foreign Office before assuming his present assignment here in Washington. He has attended many conferences, including the International Monetary Conference at San Francisco and United Nations Assembly meetings, as representative of the United Kingdom. Early this year he received the decoration of the Order of St. Michael and St. George.

Immediately after Mr. Gore-Booth's address, the annual meeting of the Washington Branch will be held. A new executive vice president will be elected.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Otherwise Devoted Couple, Parents of Five Children, Fall Into Habit of Having Sharp Words at Table—When Father Picks On Sons

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am 34 years old and Jim is 35. He had two years of high schooling and I am a high school graduate. We have been married 14 years and have five children, ranging in ages from 13 years to 22 months.

My husband is very good for the most part and we are buying our own home and I love him and do everything I can to help. I do all the housework and laundry, make clothes for the children and myself and spend very little on personal dress.

The problem is that although Jim favors our girls, he is hard on the boys (who are 11 and 9) and seems to begrudge them the food they eat—not all the time, but too often. To give an example, at supper recently the younger boy was the last to be served cottage cheese and there was just a nice portion for him, but Jim scolded him for taking it all. I said that everyone else had an equal amount and it didn't matter, but Jim insisted it was hoggish and said I spoil them to death.

Thinks It Ignoble to Fight Over Food

I TRY to understand the children and treat them as I would wish to be treated, and I don't think I spoil them. In fact they always seem better behaved than most other children. I come of a large family, where we could eat our fill of food on the table; and now we, too, have plenty of food so I think our children should eat as much as they wish. I feel there is something degrading about fighting over food.

Then tonight the elder boy was seated next to the baby at table and she climbed out of her high chair and stepped in his plate. He wanted to get a clean plate and I said he could, but his father blew up and said "No," he couldn't. At these times I hate my husband,—especially as he doesn't correct the children when he should.

I realize it doesn't do the children any good to have these fights in front of them, but it seems I can't make Jim understand my feelings; and if I don't speak up for the children's rights, who will? If my attitude is wrong, I am ready to change; and my husband knows I am writing to you. Please help us. W.B.

Man Feels He's Being Slighted

DEAR W.B.: Obviously you are a strongly maternal woman; and like most mothers of sons (in a large brood) doubtless you feel an extra dividend of satisfaction in catering to your boys—just as your husband is partial to his girls.

Further it is likely that your natural feeling of special tolerance for the opposite sex (of your own flesh) would register in your face and manner especially at meals, as you note with thankful interest the family's avid response to your offerings. And certainly a hungry small boy relishing good food is a heartwarming sight to a devoted housekeeper.

I have sketched this aspect of your sentiment for the boys because I think it is fueling Jim's harshness to them at table. As I see the problem, he resents their presence, especially then, because unconsciously he feels as if they were "beating his time" with you, in the sense of getting the lion's share of your notice, sympathy, listening-attention, etc., either candidly or undercover.

Fails to Separate Present From Past

IT STRIKES ME that he feels as if you "forget" him in favor of them most of the time; and meals are a concentrated stimulant of his secret wrath on this hidden sore point, also an opportunity seized by him to slap down his pigmy rivals for allegedly righteous cause.

And now before either of you has a shock reaction to this insight into Jim's problem behavior, I hasten to add that it isn't uncommon or unnatural for a fond husband and faithful father to wrestle blindly with charges of hostility towards his progeny, especially his sons. And in general it means the man is failing to distinguish between his adult trials and the childhood frustrations he suffered long ago in relation to his parents and brothers (or sisters.)

That is, in relation to his wife and progeny he tends to feel as cheated, thwarted, ill used, etc., as he once felt when scratching not too successfully for full mead of mother love. Healing of such a problem begins with (1) objective awareness on the man's part, and (2) sympathetic understanding on the wife's part, of the hangover nature of his peeve. And as part of the cure, the wife should be generously considerate of the man's hidden hunger, whereas he should be equally considerate of his sons' defenseless feelings.M. H.

Trick for Chic

Little Furs Have a Big Season

By Peggy Preston

LITTLE furs are having such a big season that it appears they have cornered a nice permanent nook for themselves in the fashion picture. Now the trick is to learn how to wear them properly.

Esther Dorothy, the designer who has launched many of our recent fur fashions, has come up with some sensible tips on the subject.

Says Esther: "The way you look in a fur stole, cape or small wrap is not a matter of mysterious chic. It is merely a case of selecting the right size and shape for your height and figure."

1. For the tall, thin figure, the lines should be flaring rather than bulky. Long, straight lines are best for the stout, mature woman. The latter should choose a stole or cape with the skins worked vertically on crepe or chiffon to emphasize the repeated long lines of the skins. If you are petite, don't muffle yourself with thick skins or a huge stole. Choose a miniature size in a cape, or wear a wide, flaring ascot.

2. A beautiful fur wrap is as valuable and useful to you as a new car. Just as you learn to "know" your car, take the trouble to learn how to handle your stole or scarf. Let the furrier show you several different ways to wrap it. Study these and practice in front of a full length mirror until you can manage it perfectly with the most attractive effect.

3. Don't insult your fur with the wrong hat. Keep your wrap on when trying on hats so you can be sure they are happy together.

Teen-Agers Bolster New Fashion

TEEN-AGERS have made more than one important contribution to adult fashion, and now it looks as though they've done it again. Their adored "flats," the little shoes with the inconsequential heels, have been adopted by high fashion experts and are on their way to becoming the hits of the forthcoming spring season.

No longer will the comfortable "flats" be worn by youngsters alone. At a recent showing here of advance styles by Cellini, delicate little shoes with dainty details were displayed in sizes ranging up to 12! Heels measured ⅞ of an inch, promising such comfort that it is small wonder that adult women are finding them so tempting.

Made of excellent leather, they come in a variety of shades and fabrics. Red and blue leather appear to have the edge numerically, with patent leather and suede next in line for spring. Camel colored leather is another thing to shop for in February when these new "flats" arrive at Rich's shoe store.

FOR THE PETITE MISS—A trim, jaunty little ascot, smartly flared at one shoulder and guaranteed not to "drown" the small figure. Because it is so minute you can afford to have it made from a truly luxurious fur, match it with a muff. Furs and hats should be congenial, so why not try matching a fur-trimmed hat to your ascot? Tiny girls should avoid bulky or long-haired furs

FOR THE TALL GIRL—A spectacular and adaptable fur scarf that has dramatic appeal. Made of your favorite type of pelts (mink, mole, muskrat, etc.), it will tie in several different ways and may be worn with either coats, suits or dresses. Good for both day and evening wear. When purchasing your fur scarf, let the furrier show you several ways to wrap it to suit your type and changing moods. Then experiment yourself

FOR THE SHORT, MATURE FIGURE—A miniature cape stole, cleverly curved so as to flatter, but not overwhelm the short woman. Long lines in front give the effect of height. The three pieces shown here are recommended by Esther Dorothy, fur stylist, for each specific figure type. Since small furs are worn primarily for flattery, they should be chosen for what they can do for you

Flower Fragrance for the Bride-to-Be

THE holiday bride plans all the details of her wedding well in advance of the important event so that she goes to the altar with a fresh, clear mind, unruffled and radiant.

During the exciting weeks before the day, you shop for the wonderful clothes for your trousseau, the exactly right accessories for your dresses and suits. And don't forget that most personal of all accessories—your fragrance. Whether you are wearing a wedding gown in the traditional manner or being married in a street dress of blue or one of the heavenly new mauves, you will want the aura of fragrance which surrounds you to be as subtly feminine as your costume.

No heavy perfume for the fresh-looking, radiant bride! Rather, you'll want a light scent, to match the clear brilliance of your eyes. Take time to select the fragrance which is exactly the one for you on your wedding day. The myriad of delicate floral bouquets or fresh, spicy scents offer a wide choice to the discerning bride-to-be.

SO THAT you may be sure that your selection is the right one, here are a few simple rules to follow:

1. Try the perfume on your own skin. Scent changes on each individual because the chemistry of the skin affects the fragrance. Let the liquid dry before smelling it.

2. Try no more than three perfumes at any one time. If you don't find the one you like, take a walk around the store and come back to try three more.

3. Don't rush. The perfume expert wants you to be satisfied.

4. Once you have found the perfume you like, carry out the same fragrance in all your toiletries such as toilet water and cologne, sachet, dusting powder, bath salts, soap. It is these toiletries which form the foundation of your fragrance, your perfume being the accent.

5. Most important rule of all is, wear the fragrance which you yourself like. You wouldn't buy a hat unless you thought it was the most becoming one you could find. Then don't select a fragrance because you're in too much of a hurry or too tired to look further. Find the right one for you.

Pan American Women Set Reception in Honor Of Outstanding Mexican

By Genevieve Reynolds

SENORA AMALIA de CASTILLO LEDON, new chairman of the Inter-American Commission of Women, will be guest of honor at a reception on Friday at 4:30 p. m. at the Pan American Union. Hostess at the welcoming event will be the Pan American Liaison Committee of Women's Organizations.

Tall, stately Senora de Castillo Ledon comes from Mexico. An ardent feminist, she was also one of her country's first successful woman politicos. She stepped into politics about 15 years ago when such a move was a daring, unheard of venture for a social leader. She has also chalked up several "firsts" in the literary field. Poet and dramatist, she is the only woman playwright in her native land to achieve outstanding success in that field. Her best known play, "When the Leaves Fall Down," was presented 100 times. Among her other works to receive wide acclaim is "The Biography of Outstanding Women in Mexico."

At one time she was publisher and editor of a woman's magazine. During the war she originated and organized and directed a movement to promote the solidarity of democracy in the Americas.

Since 1944 she has served as vice chairman of the Inter-American Commission. Following the resignation of Miss Minerva Bernardino last summer, she was elected chairman. Blonde, blue-eyed Senora de Castillo Ledon has represented Mexico at several United Nations Conferences. Recently she was appointed by the Director-General of UNESCO to represent the women on educational problems. Currently in Paris filling that assignment, she will fly here for the reception Friday.

Dr. Alberto Lleras, Secretary-General, Organization of American States; the Mexican Ambassador to the United States don Rafael de la Colina, and Mrs. Burnita Shelton Matthews, judge of the United States District Court for D. C., will be among those sharing honors with Senora de Castillo Ledon at the fiesta.

Distinguished Guests on List

DISTINGUISHED guests attending will be Mrs. Fred Vinson, wife of the Chief Justice; Senora de Lleras, wife of the Secretary General, OAS; Mrs. John Steelman, wife of the Assistant to the President; Mrs. Oscar Chapman, wife of the Secretary of the Interior; Mrs. Charles F. Brannan, wife of the Secretary of Agriculture; Mrs. Stanley Reed, wife of the associate justice; Mrs. Paul Daniel, wife of the United States Ambassador to OAS; Mrs. Willard F. Barber and Mrs. William Manger

Diplomatic wives will take turns at the tea table, among whom will be Senora de Sevilla-Sacasa, wife of the Nicaraguan Ambassador; Senora de Thomen, wife of the Dominican Ambassador; Senora de Dillon, wife of the Ecuadorean Ambassador; Senora de la Colina, wife of the Mexican Ambassador; Senora Berckemeyer, wife of the Peruvian Ambassador; Senora de Pocaterra, wife of the Venezuelan Ambassador; Senora de Boettner, wife of the Paraguayan Ambassador; Senora de Zuleta-Angel, wife of the Colombian Ambassador; Senora de Rodriguez, wife of the Charge d'Affaires of the Chilean Embassy.

Still others presiding at the tea table will be Senora de Quiros, wife of the Counselor of the Argentine Embassy, and Senora de Meyer, wife of the Minister Counselor of the Cuban Embassy.

Mrs. Thomas Burke, president, PALC, will preside during the meeting. Mrs. John Donaldson is chairman, and Mrs. Louis Renfrow, vice chairman of the reception committee.

Columnist Heard by Club

Members of the Woman's National Democratic Club yesterday heard Mrs. Doris Fleeson, syndicated columnist, and Mrs. May Craig, correspondent for Maine newspapers, describe a recent around-the-world trip. Miss Florence Taaffe, acting program chairmen, introduced the speakers. Mrs. Julian Friant, club president, presided.

West Point Wives Will Lunch Today

The West Point Wives Club will meet for luncheon today at the Army-Navy Country Club. Mrs. Kean L. Berry and Mrs. James B. Cobb will be hostesses.

Dolls which were distributed at the last meeting will be brought to this meeting dressed for Christmas, and a prize will be given for the best dressed. Bridge will follow.

Ask Anne

Where in this area can one obtain a "shampoo hat" (plastic halo) for a child to keep soap out of eyes? L. W.

Shampoo shades can be purchased in the infants department of the large department store between 10th and 11th on F st. They come in several pastel colors, sell for 39 cents each and would make a most usable "little" Christmas gift for a young mother on your list.

About Obtaining Child's 'Shampoo Hat'

In this area would furniture be damaged by the extremes of temperature in an unheated attic if stored there? W. W. W.

No, the winter temperatures in this area are not usually low enough to cause furniture damage in an unheated attic. If, however, the furniture is to remain in the attic during the warm months there could be damage from drying out. Excessive heat causes joints to loosen and may even affect the finish. If the attic is well insulated or has ample cross ventilation to keep down temperatures the chance of damage from heat is much lessened.

Would you be so kind and print a recipe for the famous large, soft Pennsylvania Dutch Pretzels? D. E. L.

I have been unable to find this recipe. Can any of our readers give it to us?

Can you advise if there is any way in which I may bleach a sheer white woolen scarf which has become yellow through age? I have been afraid to bleach because I don't know if that will harm the wool or not. E. L. F.

Household bleaches should not be used on woolens. Instead, use sodium perborate which can be purchased in crystal form at most drugstores. Dissolve four tablespoons of perborate into a pint of soapy water and let the scarf soak in this solution for 30 minutes or so. If the scarf does not become entirely white with the first treatment, repeat.

I have a prewar peasant blouse of fine ecru cotton crepe elaborately embroidered in red silk floss. After many dry cleanings it didn't seem fresh, so I washed it, after testing a place below the waistband which came out O. K. I used mild soap solution, squeezed excess moisture out with towel, stuffed it with crumpled waxed paper, and hung it on the line on a good day. It came out fine except for the lower part of one sleeve where apparently the floss was from a different dye lot; there it bled onto the fabric and is conspicuous Can you tell me how to remove the red streaks? F. W. F.

If the streaks ran into a part of the fabric where there is no embroidery you may be able to remove them by applying a bleach just to this area. Color remover which is sold where dyes are sold is an effective bleach for dyes. Dissolve two teaspoons of the powdered color remover in one pint of water. To apply, stretch the stained portion of the fabric over a bowl of water and drop the color remover on the stain with an eye dropper. If the color remover starts to become absorbed in the embroidered area, emerse it quickly into the water. By taking plenty of time to apply the color remover slowly you may be able to lessen the streaked area enough to make it less conspicuous.

If the dye is streaked in the embroidered area there is really no way to remove it, for anything which would remove dye would also take the color out of the embroidery.

This afternoon I mended a broken dish with household cement. Although I spread papers under the article, and the cement did not come through the paper, I found four or five tiny marks on the top of my new limed oak dining room table. It is a veneer top, I believe, with solid legs. The marks are not in the wood itself, but the cement removed the hard shiny top finish which seems to peel from the marks now. Is there any way I can cover these marks? A. L. C.

Spots where the finish has been removed can be filled in with transparent stick shellac applied with a heated tool. On very tiny marred places, this is quite a delicate operation for an amateur, but if you work slowly and adequately prepare the surface for the application you should be able to do it.

In order to get the shellac just into the marred places, it is wise to cover the area surrounding them with masking or cellulose tape. If the marred places are round you may be able to cut holes from the tape to exactly match the size of the blemishes.

Heat the stick shellac in an open flame at the same time holding the end of a heavy wire hairpin (the woman's favorite tool) to the shellac. As the shellac melts, a small bit will run onto the hair pin and can then be immediately transferred to the break. When the break is filled with shellac, press it down and allow it to become firm. Remove the masking tape and very carefully level the shellac down with a razor blade. When no more leveling can be done with a blade, rub it with 6-0 finishing paper which has been dipped in rubbing oil. Finish the treatment by rubbing it well with wax.

Ravages Incurred in Line Of Duty Prolong Weekend For Gridiron Club's Elite

By Mary Van Rensselaer Thayer

A FEW discreet Monday morning telephone calls beamed at prominent Gridiron participants revealed ravages incurred in line of duty far more extensive than first estimated.

The majority of those approached prolonged the weekend of The Great Hangover by eschewing their offices. A Gridiron novice, initiated at Saturday's session, demonstrated his naivete by turning up at his desk, though he admitted to dizziness on the slightest effort—such as lifting a telephone receiver. Perhaps the most interesting case was that of a well known radio broadcaster who discovered the sole efficacious post-Gridiron remedy was a continued munching of bran muffins.

To the dispassionate observer of the Sunday afternoon Gridiron Show (staged for the benefit of wives, female companions, distinguished ladies of the press; minus skits and costumes but including all musical numbers) the astonishing fact was how much genuine artistic talent lies fallow amongst top drawer newsmen.

Swings a Mean Leg

TAKE an example close to home. J. R. Wiggins, managing editor of The Washington Post, is known to those who toil for him as a serious type, completely devoted to piloting and untangling the myriad difficulties besetting a metropolitan daily. Yet in the Gridiron's (necessarily) all-male chorus, though most of the time he modestly half-hid behind a more bulky confrere, one couldn't help but notice that he swung a mean leg and, in the "Blow Gabrielson, Blow" refrain, completed with perfect aplomb a gesture which involved shimmying most of the lower torso muscles.

Defense Folks on the Defensive

HIGHLIGHTS to an enjoyable afternoon including spotting Admiral Louis Denfeld in the audience during the rendition of the most cutting of all satires aimed at Defense Chief Louis Johnson and sung to "I'm Such a Wonderful Guy," and the delirious, outsize, peaked blue Air Force cap, worn by the guy impersonating Gen. Hoyt Vandenberg while he sang about the Air Force's private blue yonder to which neither Russians nor the Navy were to be admitted.

Nicest juxtaposition of the Gridiron weekend happened at Richard Harkness' Sunday luncheon when 1948's big Republican trio, Thomas Dewey, Paul Lockwood and Herbert Brownell, all stood within a few feet of Democratic National Committee Chairman Bill Boyle. Governor Dewey, in extra good cheer, demonstrates nicely the wonderful recuperative powers of the human body. Despite his severe political battering and undoubted mental anguish, his face is almost completely lineless, his expression shows no dent of tough experience.

Make Home in District After Honeymoon Trip

On return from their New England wedding trip, Mr. and Mrs. Gabrield Ernest Ferazzi will reside in Washington. They were married November 19 at St. Francis Xavier Church, Cresson, Pa.

Mrs. Ferazzi, the former Miss Madeline Marie David, is employed at the office of Senator Edward Martin (R., Pa.). The bridegroom is athletic coach at Roosevelt High School.

The Family Scrapbook

By Dr. Ernest G. Osborne

Before the turn of the century, a little girl in New York wrote to one of the city's great newspapers and asked whether there really was a Santa Claus. The editor's answer to that letter has been printed hundreds of times since then. In it he told his young friends that, of course, there was a Santa, that the spirit of Christmas, the friendly, generous spirit that one sees so often at the Yuletide was the thing that was really Santa Claus.

Some of us believe that we should try to keep our children believing in a real Santa Claus, one who comes from the North Pole with his reindeer and his bag of toys for good children. Some of us question the desirability of being so literal. We fear that youngsters will feel we have fooled them when they find there "really isn't any Santa Claus."

But most of us are agreed that the Santa Claus story is one that children should enjoy. Most youngsters, too, will get as much satisfaction out of seeing department store Santas or out of having a member of the family play Santa as they do out of actually believing there is a Santa Claus.

However we work out things in our own families, we shouldn't push Santa Claus out at Christmastime. He's one symbol of the Christmas spirit that brings a lot of enjoyment to young and old.

Red Cross Plea:

Santa Needs Help for Yule In Hospitals

Three hundred Christmas stocking gifts for patients at St. Elizabeth's; fruit candy and nuts for 600 Walter Reed patients, and 200 medium-sized Christmas trees for St. Elizabeth's are among the unfilled needs of the District Red Cross hospital Christmas list.

Mrs. Roderick W. McKinnon, chairman of the Red Cross Christmas Project Committee, said that with the deadline approaching for these items, it is especially important that they be taken care of this week.

The stockings for St. Elizabeths have already been made by the Red Cross production service, "but we now need items to put in them," Mrs. McKinnon said. The patients are particularly pleased to receive wash cloths, soap, and little packages of facial tissue in their stockings, she explained. Other particularly acceptable gifts include cigarettes, powder puffs, shelled nuts, handkerchiefs, face powder, lipstick and rouge in cardboard cartons. The patients are not permitted to receive gifts containing plastic, glass, metal materials or matches.

Anyone willing to provide these needed Christmas gifts for the hospitals is asked to telephone the District Red Cross Christmas Committee at Republic 8300, Extension 2057.

Mergenthaler Net Jumps to $11.02 a Share

By S. Oliver Goodman

Mergenthaler Linotype Co. netted $2,597,565 or $11.02 a common share for the fiscal year ended September 30, President Martin M. Reed reported yesterday in the annual pamphlet statement to stockholders.

Reed

This compared with $1,675,583 or $7.11 a share in the previous 12 months. The figures do not include $756,538 of accumulated prior years' dividends on the preference stock of the British subsidiary received in 1949 and $504,049 similarly received in 1948, Reed pointed out.

Net sales for the latest fiscal year aggregated $23,124,530, as compared with $20,197,163 in the previous year.

Commenting on the year's operations, President Reed stated that "there remains unfilled in the graphic arts industry a backlog of deferred need for new capital equipment, including Linotype machines. The printing business in most sections of the country remains good, although it has receded from the abnormal peak of the past few years."

He anticipated that Mergenthaler's volume will remain substantial for the coming year "although somewhat below 1949 sales."

Mergenthaler is not yet convinced, Reed said, that the solution to printing cost problems will be found in the field of photocomposition. He added that the company has developed a "good, practical, working photo-composing machine" but it is "not the ultimate in photo-composition. Whether it will ever be offered to the trade is problematical."

Current assets of Mergenthaler totaled $21,116,013 at the end of the fiscal year, against $18,227,361 a year ago.

BONUS: For the sixteenth consecutive year, employes of Chandler's shoe store, 1208 F st. nw., will receive Christmas bonus checks. Manager Charles Johnson said that this year $350,000 is being distributed among the 3500 employes of Edison Brothers Stores Inc., which operates 213 stores in 116 cities. The company also will contribute $225,000 to its employes' retirement pension plan which has been in force now for six years.

WHO'S WHO TODAY: Kendall Foster, formerly of Washington, has been elected vice president in charge of television for William Esty Co., Inc., of New York... Neil Wyndham, Morris O'Harra and Charles Laub contributed outstanding sales jobs as their firm, Southern Wholesalers, Inc., of Washington, won a Nation-wide contest among Deepfreeze distributors . . . The advertising firm of McCann-Erickson, Inc., has elected four women as vice presidents. They are Miss Alberta Hays, Mrs. Dorothy B. McCann, Miss Florence Richards and Miss Margot Sherman . . . C. G. Gran, formerly with the American Plant Food Council, Inc., of Washington, has been appointed manager of agricultural sales development for Mathieson Chemical Corp. . . . E. J. Krause has been named general service manager of Buick Motor. . . . Willard H. Campbell has been appointed chairman of the sales promotion division of National Retail Dry Goods Association .

New York Cotton

New York, Dec. 12 (AP).—Cotton futures experienced a sharp early sell-off today, but later recovered somewhat. Final prices were 10 to 60 cents a bale lower. Liquidation was touched off by uncertainty over the status of the 1950 cotton control program on which farmers will vote in a referendum this coming Thursday.

G. Washington Rule on Party Walls Upheld

A regulation of President George Washington allowing property owners to build party walls partly on the land of their neighbors is still good law, Judge James W. Morris ruled yesterday.

At issue is a 41-foot extension of a brick wall built between the tracts of Frank Cappelletti at 1321 N. Capitol st. and Benjamin Auerbach at 1319 N. Capitol st. The wall built by Auerbach was protested by Cappelletti as an illegal encroachment.

The District Court jurist went back to the original deeds by which the proprietors of the land in the Federal city conveyed it to be laid out as the city by President Washington.

The presidential regulation said the foundations of the party walls were to be laid equally on each lot and to be of the proper thickness.

Cappelletti contended the law must be interpreted in the light of a city that has grown many fold since the law was enacted.

He argued the provisions in the original deeds apply only to vacant property and that a brick party wall should not be erected next to a frame porch, as in this case.

Judge Morris said the fact that the wall was of brick and was next to a frame building made no difference and that Auerbach could not recover damages on the ground that it was an illegal encroachment.

However, Judge Morris said that Auerbach can recover for damage to his steps and concrete walkway chipped in the construction of the wall.

The Man Who—

Secrets of Personal Power

Young Found the Way You Begin Is Important

By David Guy Powers

Instructor of Instructors at Dale Carnegie Institute

Chapter III

FOR YEARS Owen D. Young has startled people by seeing through proposals immediately, and by giving a prompt answer of "yes" or "no" to propositions that most men would "take under advisement."

I asked him the secret of his skill in making quick decisions.

"I am guided in large part by the way a man begins his proposal," said Mr. Young. "I have found from experience that if he does not thoroughly understand the proposal, his beginning will be confused.

"If he is not convinced of the values of the proposal, his beginning will be evasive. He will avoid certain aspects of the idea.

"If the details of the proposal aren't concrete in his mind, his beginning will be abstract.

"On the other hand, when a man begins with a clear idea, compactly expressed and concretely illustrated—it is usually worthwhile. These qualities are the result of thought and rethought."

Sound Method

THIS IS a sound way to measure a man's thinking. To make a thing clear to someone else you have to know it thoroughly.

The best possible test of your thinking is, "Can I give an example in detail?" If you can't, you and the idea are still strangers.

Cudgel your brain until you can. You may discover enough flaws in your idea to prevent you from presenting it. If not, you will go to the interview with the confidence that you can't be stumped.

Check your proposal for the three Cs: Clarity, Compactness, and Concreteness. Remember, these three qualities result only from thought and rethought.

Don't follow Gracie Allen's method for sorting the weeds from the flowers: "You just tear out the whole garden—and the weeds come up again."

Sales Letter

H. N. RASELY, executive vice president of Burdett College, Boston, Mass., is one of the world's most famous authorities on letter writing. I asked him what was the most effective sales letter ever written. Here is his story, and the letter:

"A few years ago a manufacturer analyzing his customer ledgers compiled a list of 100 good dealers from whom orders were no longer being received.

"The list was broken down into territories. Salesmen in those territories were instructed to call and attempt to win back the business.

"Several months passed without results. Then the advertising manager wrote a short letter. Within 12 months, 20 of the inactive accounts were back on the books with orders totaling over a million dollars. How was it accomplished? Read the letter."

Here it is:

"Dear Mr. ——:

"You know how it is in business. There are a lot of people that you'd like to sell goods to who don't trade with you. Quite likely you can name a dozen men, right in your own town, just your kind of fellows, who don't come to you.

"You wish they would. You believe, honestly, that it would pay them to do so and you'd like to know why they don't.

"You no longer buy from us and we'd like to know the reason. Won't you tell us what the reason is? You'll be doing us a favor if you will, for it's probably something we should know."

"Sincerely,

"Replies poured in and in many cases there was something the manufacturer should know—dissatisfaction with delivery, discourtesy on the part of the salesmen, etc. These complaints were investigated and remedied and, as a result, a million dollars' worth of business was put back on the books—all because of one effective letter."

Course in Logic

I WAS asked to give a course in logic at Brooklyn Polytechnic Institute.

I decided to get away from the routine practice and see if I could make the subject more interesting.

When I came to the syllogism, for example, instead of using the prosaic "All men are mortal" as a major premise, I borrowed Louis Carroll's universal, "All hungry crocodiles are dangerous."

At least, said I to myself, this has some whimsy in it. After a few attempts I had to abandon it. Young men who have never seen a crocodile defended his gentility with a fervour worthy of Savonarola.

When in the name of the world, I wondered, made them take up the cause of the crocodile?

I think I know now. A dogmatic statement is a challenge. Why? Because it doesn't allow for give and take. My statement wasn't leading them to anything, it was forcing something upon them. That "hungry crocodiles are dangerous" didn't invite their opinion. So they set up opposition.

Don't Overstate

UNDERSTATE your case—never overstate it!

"Too much magnifying of man or matter irritates contradiction, and procures envy and scorn," said Bacon. When you overstate your case you invite opposition.

But when you understate it you charmingly disarm your hearers.

When you overstate, you challenge your hearer to a contest. You present your discovery in such striking terms that he reacts with, "Can this be true?" Such a response throws the burden of proof upon you.

The best way to understate your case is to leave an impression that the matter is not normally settled. In other words, leave some room on the bandwagon.

Your hearer will climb on the wagon if he sees a place for himself.

Christmas Cards

My Christmas cards are signed and sealed . . . And ready to be mailed . . . And in remembering my friends . . . I hope I have not failed . . . Because I want to say hello . . . To each and every one . . . And wish them Merry Christmas and . . . A New Year full of fun . . . But just in case I did forget . . . To file their names away . . . I have some extra greeting cards . . . To make their spirits gay . . . And so if I should hear from one . . . Who did not hear from me . . . I shall be fairly ready to . . . Defend my memory . . . Except of course I would not take . . . The time to fret and fuss . . . If my delay in mailing cards . . . Would be too obvious.

THE DISTRICT LINE by Bill Gold

When They Buy Cigars It's Even Worse

Ordinarily, the purchase of a package of cigarettes is a relatively brief transaction.

The fellow ahead of you calls out his brand, lays down his money, and walks away. Then it's your turn, and you do the same—and rapidly make way for the next man.

But not so at Christmas time. This is the season of the year when the ladies are buying gifts for their menfolks. And a woman never buys anything until she's pondered over every item in stock.

Get behind one of these deliberate shoppers some day, while you slowly die for want of a smoke.

"Don't you have any tobacco pouches with zippers?" she'll ask. The clerk will lay out several with zippers, and there will follow a learned discussion of the relative merits of the zipper type versus the fold-up type.

"Don't they come in any other colors than brown?" she'll ask. The clerk will dig down for more pouches, which will turn out to be black, and even less desirable.

"Well, I don't know," she'll say. "I guess I'd better look around a bit. Those colors aren't very cheerful for a Christmas gift."

"Yes, madam. Thank you madam," the clerk will murmur as he starts to put his stock back on the shelves. And, you know something?

Sometimes I suspect that he's glad to be rid of such a shopper.

MAIL BAG

Dear Bill:

You failed to discuss one important point in your recent item about the local taxi situation.

The zone rates are not fair, inasmuch as a passenger who rides only one or two blocks may cross a zone line and be charged for two zones. Meters, as successfully employed in other cities, provide a fair basis for charging everybody a proper fee.

G. J. Winters.
4004 Beecher st. nw.

Dear Mr. Winters:

Very true. Meters come closer to reflecting mileage than do zones. But they have serious drawbacks.

In the first place, meters are not true odometers. They are influenced either by the distance traversed or the time which has elapsed—whichever will run them up faster. Rush-hour traffic, with its many delays, takes a heavy toll when you're paying according to a meter.

This means the passenger never knows what his trip will cost. Besides, most meters have at least a 25-cent "drop on the flag"—in other words, it costs a quarter to sit down in the back seat. So if the passenger is so lazy that he can't walk two blocks, he gets stuck either with a meter or a zone rate.

The proof of the pudding is in the eating. Washington's cab rates are far lower than those that prevail in any American city which uses meters.

That's why our hackers do a proportionately larger volume of business per vehicle. The public knows in advance that the rate for a given journey is predetermined—and extremely low. So great numbers of us ride taxis. But if the rates were raised, many of us would not be able to afford cabs.

Bill.

SUGGESTION BOX

David Kandel of 1311 H st. nw. has an excellent idea for the movie moguls. In fact it's so good he ought to sell it to them, instead of giving it away.

The idea is based on the predicament of the average moviegoer, who isn't too familiar with the lesser stars in Hollywood's galaxy.

They see a good performance in a minor role, and go home without ever finding out the name of the actor.

So Dave suggests that the film people should stock their lobbies with pamphlets giving the names and pictures of all the players in the movie, so that patrons can be on the lookout for these good actors in future productions.

That would appear to be a very sound method of drumming up more business. Unless, of course, the performances are so bad that the patrons would use the pamphlets to find out which stars to avoid in the future.

OLD-BUT-STILL-GOOD DEPT.

Gretchen Hood of 1226 Fairmont st. nw. reports that this familiar story, used on one of the network programs the other night, is still good for a chuckle.

It's the one about the little boy at his first concert. After watching with rapt attention for a while, he turned to his mother and asked:

"What's the leader mad at, Mommy? Why is he shaking his stick at the lady?"

"Shhh," replied the mother. "He's just keeping time for her—he's not angry with her." The lad pondered that explanation for a bit, and then demanded:

"Then what's she screaming for?"

Wallace 'In' On A-Bomb Experiments

By Drew Pearson

Henry Wallace has come in for some vigorous criticism from this column, but it is only fair to give the real facts regarding Wallace's connection with atomic energy.

Wallace

Gen. Leslie Groves stated last week that he withheld most atomic secrets from Wallace, then Vice President, because he was fearful of leaks. But the ironic fact was that Wallace probably knew as much about atomic development as Groves and in the long run was more responsible than Groves for the birth of the atomic bomb.

Here are some facts, now pretty well forgotten, which may give perspective to the present furore over atomic energy.

First proposal to crack the atom came from Dr. Einstein in a letter delivered to President Roosevelt by Alexander Sachs of Lehman Brothers. Einstein reported that he had learned via the underground that the Germans were working on atomic energy and that he believed refugee scientists could develop it ahead of the Germans. He especially had in mind the use of atomic energy for the powering of naval vessels.

Following Einstein's letter, Roosevelt appointed Henry Wallace as chairman of a super-secret Government board to ascertain whether the highly speculative goal of atomic energy was worth the expense of trying to develop in wartime. Wallace was picked probably because he had been in touch with some of the leading physicists—Enrico Fermi, Leo Szilard, Einstein and Dr. Harold Urey—also because he, himself, was a scientist and had been responsible for developing a hybrid corn which increased the Nation's crop by 400 million bushels.

U. S. Military Lukewarm

Wallace, after various conferences, reported back to FDR that atomic energy was definitely worth the enormous expense in dollars and manpower. As a result the Manhattan Project was born.

At that time United States military leaders were not enthusiastic. They faced tremendous shortages of material and did not want anything to detract from the immediate winning of the war. General Marshall, then Chief of Staff, went along with the idea, but Gen. B. B. Somervell, in charge of supplies, was skeptical.

Perhaps is was because some of the brass hats considered the atom project a starry-eyed dream of a visionary Vice President that General Groves was picked to command the Manhattan Project.

Wallace's Secrets

Unquestionably Groves did withhold secrets from Vice President Wallace. But unquestionably also Wallace knew about as much as anyone else high up in the Government regarding the progress of the brain child which he had helped to launch. For he continued his close contacts with General Marshall and Secretary of War Stimson; and Wallace's aides frequently wondered what lay behind his luncheons with Marshall and Stimson about which he refused to talk.

Later Groves and Wallace found themselves on the same side of the fence, when military leaders suggested that the Manhattan Project be terminated. This was in the spring of 1945, when some military leaders argued that B-29s could sufficiently devastate Germany and Japan without an atomic bomb.

It was General Groves, by then emphatically sold on atomic energy, who threw his weight in favor of continuation. Undersecretary Patterson concurred.

Einstein Saddens

Old Man Einstein, the godfather of atomic energy, is having his house painted. It needs more than that. It stands, gray and weather-beaten, on a residential street in Princeton, and one post of the porch is eaten away at the base by ants or termites.

But the things that make Albert Einstein sad are not related to painting and carpentry. One is the condition of his invalid sister. Another is what is happening in international affairs.

His brown eyes are still bright, however, especially when he encounters a fresh idea.

In international affairs, Einstein is troubled by the cold war and its effect of rebuilding Germany. As an intellectual, he does not share the views of political and military experts about the menace of Russia. He thinks that a strong Germany offers a far greater menace and that the Western policy of rebuilding Germany as a bastion against Russia is utter folly.

He doesn't express these views for publication. He tries to keep out of public life, and he shuns interviews. He was deeply hurt by attacks in the press and by mail which followed a previous expression of views.

When a visitor called on him recently, he discussed the East-West conflict, with a dolorous shake of his long white hair that reaches down to his shoulders. But he permitted only one sentence to be quoted. Coming from a man who is himself German, it was a powerful sentence.

The present policy toward Germany, said Einstein, "is the same madness the Western powers committed after the last war."
